SUMMER.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.
BY E. NORMAN GUNNISON.

Summer! O beautiful Summer!
Languid and tropic and burning;
Latest and sweetest newcomer,
Filled with an infinite yearning—
Yearning for hillsides and grasses;
Down in the heart of the city,
Weary each moment that glasses
Scenes that the angels must pity.

Out on the flower-decked savanna,
Out by the hillside and river,
Summer hangs newly its banner;
Lily-cups daintily shiver,
Touched by the hands of the wealthy,
Roaming at will in the wildwood;
Here in the city, unhealthy,
Want drains the heart-blood of childhood.

Millions at Newport, and laces,
Sorrow and want in the city;
God! see the destitute faces!
Touch with a feeling of pity!
Out of Thy tender compassion,
Out of Thy mercy, all-seeing!
Mete to these Children of Fashion
As they mete out to each being.

Still the sad wailing of childhood
Sounds in our ears—Destitution
Needs not a home in the wildwood;
Give to their hearts restitution.
Give them some childhood, O brothers!
Be not their cry raise in vain.
As ye mete out unto others,
It shall be meted again.

EVELYN DE VERE;

THE TWO CITIES.

A LIFE DRAMA PLAYED ON THE WORLD'S STAGE.

CHAPTER XII—CONTINUED.

The little life-drama was being played out, with fate as its prompter and circumstances as its scene-shifter. But those who unconsciously took the leading parts knew not when the villain would come in, or where, so to speak, the traps were laid. The coming darkness which was closing in upon those who were near and dear to Evelyn was not yet felt or seen, but still stealing stealthily, slowly on.

So, while waiting to hear from Hope Brett, Evelyn was happy enough in her new home. There are joys as well as sorrows in this uncertain world of ours, no matter how tragically we are situated. Why should there not be? The sorrow-laden heart will beat merrily at times, just as truly as we must eat, drink and sleep, even with the pending sword of doom lowering upon one's head.

Mr. Falconcourt was convalescent now. He took a drive an hour a day in the sunshine, luncheon with the ladies, dinner in his own bed-chamber, and spent a quiet evening with his wife and Miss Evelyn. Now and then he received some of his particular friends in the "upper house," who took a lively interest in his welfare, and grieved with him in all bitterness of spirit over the resignation of the Premier Disraeli and the accession of the weak and blundering Liberal party who promised so much and did so little.

Mr. Ernest C. Doyle had become a "friend of the family," and so far he had carried his purpose. Camden Hope and Doyle did not agree.

"That fellow Doyle gives himself such airs," Camden would say, when alone with Evelyn. And when she remonstrated with him for his apparent unfairness, his answer was:

"My dear child, there is more hidden beneath Doyle's placid, powerful exterior than comes between Heaven and your philosophy."

"You do not like him?"

"Frankly, my dear child, I don't. It is seldom that I own and show that I despise a person. I keep out of their way, but I cannot keep out of his; therefore, I must own and show that emphatically he is a bugbear to me."

"Hope, how can you talk so of one who has been so kind and good to me?" cried Eva, with high color on her cheeks, and a tearful sparkle in her eyes. "Pray, keep your opinions of him for others, Mr. Hope. I am only sorry he's in your way here, and for——"

"In my way, Eva? Pardon me—no such thing."

"Then why are you so unfair, so unmanly?"

"My child," said Hope imploringly. He was stung to the quick. He, the soul of honor and truth, to be called unfair and unmanly! "You wrong me, Eva."

"You wrong him, sir."

"If I thought so, if I ever find it is so, believe me I would willingly admit it to him, and ask his pardon and yours."

"Mr. Doyle is nothing to me, Mr. Hope." (Oh, fie! fie! Eva.) "But I do not like to hear him stigmatized. I will not. What could you think of me, if I were to allow anyone to speak ill of my friends in my presence? You—you—anger me—you hurt me, you wound Eva's devotion to him—you cause drops were already glistening on those living windows of her soul), "and I will quarrel with you forever if you cannot respect my friends."

"Evelyn," said Hope gravely, almost sadly, "I could respect every person you deem and love when because they are your friends—but, pardon me, let me speak this once; neverwill I enter upon the subject again. Mr. Doyle is not your friend, and never will be. The man's unconquerable ambition and selfishness will not allow him to be anyone's friend, and time will prove it. I deeply regret having offended you, Eva; but I thought that, as I seem to be the only relation you have left, I might exercise the privilege of giving you a little advice. I am older than you, Eva—much older in the world's ways, and have learned them at times, just as we must learn one schoolboy knows another. If I have ever done wrong in taking upon myself the duty to watch over your interests and guide you by such advice as I think will benefit you, I ask your pardon. I will not offend again, Eva. Your friendship and—and your esteem are too dear to me to be sacrificed, even though it may be my duty to make the sacrifice, were I sure that it would be for your benefit. Don't be angry, Eva—give me your hand, and be friends."

His charming, gravely-tender voice went to Eva's heart. She looked up at him with her head, dreamy eyes, full of love and light and gratitude. He was so gentle, so protective and brotherly in his manner, that impulse made her hold up her pretty lips to him.

"I did not mean it, Cousin Hope."

"Dear child," he said with a tremor in his voice; and as he accepted the proffered kiss his whole frame thrilled, and he felt the hot blood rushing to his temples, sending fire to his eyes and quickening the pulsations of his heart.

"I am sorry, Hope, to have hurt your feelings. I will never do it again—indeed, I will not, for I know, and everybody knows, how good, honorable, and manly you are, and that you never could be anything else."

Hope smiled. He loved to hear his little stranger cousin talk when in these moods of pretty repentance or confidence.

"We must never quarrel again, Eva. Shall that be a bargain?"

"Yes, Hope."

"And now may I have the honor of taking you for a walk in the gardens? I think Miss Falconcourt is out."

Miss Falconcourt was out—she had gone to visit one of her father's maiden aunts.

"Thank you, Hope; I will accept your offer," answered Eva: and while Hope went to acquaint Mr. Falconcourt that he was going to take a walk, Evelyn got herself ready, and they went out together.

They walked in Kensington Gardens, as they had often done before. The sunlight was glimmering through the leafless trees on the greensward beneath. That peculiar tranquillity so noticeable in these gardens carried the cousins into a little world of sentiment. Hope talked of his school-days, his happy boyhood, his sainted mother (for who but a sainted woman could have been the mother and instructress of such sterling worth as Hope?), his good and amiable little sister, himself; and Eva rambled on from one theme to another, as if they had nothing to do but walk here arm-in-arm forever.

It was not until the gardens were going to be cleared of the people that Hope and Eva turned their steps towards home. Miss Falconcourt was already indoors. She had been sitting with her papa, she said, and had a bit of glorious news for Eva.

"Papa," she said, "is going to have a grand dinner-and-dance party on Thursday week, before leaving town for a change of air, so that he can call those friends around him who have shown so much kindness and good feeling towards him during his illness. Everybody will be invited, and everybody will come; I am positive they will."

"And then is Mr. Falconcourt going out of town, dear?"

"Yes, perhaps to Switzerland. I shan't go. We will snug ourselves up down in the dear old house in Warwickshire, and then we shall have the delight of tormenting poor old Aunt Amelia. Poor old thing! how I should like her, if she would not sniff."

Eva laughed, and Marian rambled on, criticising her relations, and finding faults with So-and-so's dinners, Someone-else's soirees, Lady Sniggerer's dress and jewels, the Countess Grizzlechin's (who ought to shave, she said) manner of speech, the pomp and supercilliousness of the Fantangles, until at last she got back to the "dear old house in Warwickshire" and Aunt Amelia.

"Who will," she went on, "fancy that all the young men are looking after her, and think that her dear old maidenly charms, sixty-three years old, lay her open to insult and danger from dissolute wayfarers in lonely roads. Poor dear! and I am positive she will think so to the day of her death."

Eva laughed again, and was amused. The two young ladies could understand one another perfectly, and woe to the unfortunate friend who laid herself open to their satire. Both were in very good spirits all the evening, and the coming dinner party and ball were a good deal talked about. Unfortunately for Eva, the last post that night brought her an official-looking communication from Brett, which for some time shattered her joyous spirits and made her heart sadly weary.

A memorandum inclosed in the large blue sheet contained the following:

"DEAR MADAM.—I beg to forward you the details of the Star Mining and Banking Company's failure under the management of James Emanuel De Vere.

Yours, etc., etc.

The details, as Eva read them, made her very blood curdle, and when she had done she uttered a long wail of agony. She put one hand to her throbbing heart and crumpled the fatal blue sheet of paper against her swelling breast.

"O God!" she cried, and the tears streamed out of her upturned eyes, "guide me in my ways through life—only an outcast as I am. Oh, how thankful I would have been, were I nothing worse.

The letter fell upon the ground, and poor, heartstricken Eva wept on. Let us read that communication and judge of the terrible tidings that for the time shattered every hope in this poor girl's heart.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE HISTORY OF DE VERE.

"Mr. James Emanuel De Vere, manager and partner in the Star Banking and Mining Company, was arrested on March 5, 1857, on an indictment for obtaining £30,000 by fraudulent means from a banking-firm too well known to name here. It was proved that the securities he gave for the above sum were almost valueless, as thousands of pounds had already been raised on them. James Emanuel De Vere, in defense, denied all knowledge of the transaction, and accused another partner in the firm—one Horatio Leary, who, he said, was alone guilty of the fraudulent transaction. De Vere was imprisoned, but afterwards released on £6,000 bail in two securities. On the first day of trial James De Vere, it was proved, had absconded, nor didLeary surrender to his bail. It was afterwards discovered that James De Vere had sold his house and left England with his wife on board the Fair Maid of Clyde. The firm of which James De Vere was manager suspended payment. Their liabilities amounted to £24,000,000, and, though all the branches of the firm were in a flourishing condition, their assets left them £600,000 in debt. By the Extradition Treaty, De Vere could be arrested anywhere except in Spain or Mexico. We append an extract from a report which proves that James De Vere was on board the Fair Maid of Clyde when she was run down by a foreign steamer, and out of three hundred and twenty-seven souls only forty-eight were saved. James De Vere, the absconder, is supposed to have unanimously met his death, but, sad to say, his wife had also shared his fate. There is reason to believe that she was a party to his transactions. Leary was still at large, and has never been heard of. It is to be regretted that the unhappy disaster which sacrificed so many lives and caused the loss of such property as the Fair Maid of Clyde and her valuable cargo took from our midst a man to whose door was laid the ruin of many, sadly many, honest families."

The communication went on to accuse James De Vere of being something worse than a swindler. A price was set upon his head, and there is no doubt that he would have suffered the just punishment at the hands of an indignant jury but for the unhappy event that took him to another world. The circumstances of the case were not gone into, as neither of the chief culprits made his appearance. It was supposed that Leary was also on board the Fair Maid of Clyde, and must have perished with the many others.

"Such a brief extract from the record of the terrible failure of the Star Banking and Mining Company. Further details concerning James De Vere can be sent you on receipt of orders to that effect."

Poor Eva! she did not wish for further details. She felt heart-broken as it was, for the time, by the melancholy truth that her father could have been little better than an escaped felon. What could she do? Take Hope into her confidence. Truly, she could not help her father's crimes, and again she felt that Hope must know all by the information he had given her; and then came the fear that perhaps Doyle had found out her parent's unhappy history. If so, his growing coolness was accounted for.

"Having gone so far," she mused sadly, "I will go farther. Hope shall know howmuch I have learnt of the mystery that once seemed to surround me."

A miserably restless night—such a night as one has when all our troubles come in crowded procession before us, and present themselves in the most formidable form, until there seems to be no possibility of escape, no reprieve, no respite, until the wearied, tortured mind succumbs to the power of sleep and gives up the dark realities for a scarcely less distressing mental existence in dreamland. Morning finds us as haggard and restless, as fatigued and wearied, as when we retired—more nervous, perhaps, and mentally weaker, with a crushing, hopeless despair upon us, which we fondly coax ourselves to believe is resignation to our fate. Such was Eva's case. The next morning she seemed like one upon whom had fallen a terrible calamity. Miss Falconcourt noticed it the moment they met, and she grew alarmed, the more so as Eva would give no explanation. Eva would not stir out of her little private sitting-room, Marian, distressed beyond control, sent for Hope later in the day.

"Mr. Hope," she said, laying her hand gently on his arm, "will you see your cousin? Something is the matter with her. She will not tell me, though she seems so ill and so upset, and looks positively beside herself."

"I sincerely trust nothing has happened," said Hope, with an expression of almost terror on his handsome face. "Shall I go and see her, Miss Falconcourt?"

"Yes, do; she is in her own sitting-room."

"I will go at once," said Hope, and he hurried away to where Eva was closeted alone. "It is I, Hope," he said, tapping at the door at the same time.

"Come in, Hope," was the response from the interior of the room, and Hope entered. He was startled at the reality when he saw the change that had come over his sweet cousin since the day before. Never had he seen another such utterly grief-stricken face as the one before him now.

"Eva," he said tenderly, taking her hand in his, "tell me what is the matter. Miss Falconcourt tells me that you are ill."

"Yes, Hope, I am ill, but not from bodily pain. I am glad you are come. I had intended to send for you later, having made my mind up to confide in you. Sit down by my side. Can you guess what I have been doing?"

"Nothing wrong, my child, I am sure," Hope replied, seating himself and retaining his cousin's hand still.

"Ah!" she sighed, "I do not know that I have been unraveling the mystery that surrounded my early existence. Hope, you know all, I can see."

"What is there to know?" he said, pressing her hand reassuringly, and speaking as if he made light of the matter.

"This. It was sent me by a private-inquiry-office agent. It must be true."

"I do not want to read it, Eva; I can tell pretty well what it is—extracts from the papers containing reports of the failure and absconding of parties concerned."

"And it is true. Ah, Hope! what a disgrace. Had I known it before, I would have taken another name—not for my own sake only, but for the sake of others. I am worse than an outcast—the daughter of a dishonored parent."

"My dear child, you must not take this to heart so. Your poor father would not have left the country but for the absconding of another of the firm. You must remember that your father would not have been remanded on bail but for putting in strong evidence that he was able to explain matters and clear himself of all dishonor."

"Could that be possible?"

"Fairly possible, Eva. While your father had been away transacting business at Marseilles and other places, one of the London managers, Horatio Leary, had raised money on securities that he afterwards allowed your father to raise more money on; and your father, believing the securities to be perfectly good, did so. Leary was the first to abscond. It was proved, too, that he had taken money with him. Your father then found himself helpless and alone, that he would have to bear the brunt of the whole unhappy affair, and that, unless Leary could be found, everything would go against him."

"Poor dear," murmured Eva, with an inward sob.

"Your father, my child, did what many would have done—thought of his child and wife, and fled the country for their sakes. I never could believe him guilty, nor did those who stood bail for him, for it was by their advice that he went."

Eva sighed.

"And then," she said, "they met a fate even worse than temporary imprisonment. Tell me, Hope, do you think that many people would remember the sad case on hearing my name?"

"Very few, I should think, Eva. The affair was soon hushed up when it got whispered about that Lord De Vere was a relative of your father's."

"Do you think Mr. Doyle is likely to know it?"

"Scarcely. How should he know it?"

Hope's face wore a tell-tale blush as he spoke.

"Why," he thought, "is she always thinking of Doyle, and then aloud he said: "And if he does, what is Doyle to you, that you should care?"

Eva looked up at him with a wistfulness that seemed to say: "Be my confidant—let me repose all my secrets in you, or the load will be too heavy for me to bear."

"Did Mr. Doyle ever speak of your family before he met you here?"

"No, Hope, nor since."

"And yet you knew each other well, did you not, Eva?"

"Yes, Hope. Do you not know all?"

"All what, my dear child?"

"All about—that is—there is no harm in telling it to you, Hope?"

"None, Eva."

"Doyle was the first gentleman—the first stranger—I ever came in contact with; and after I was ill he used to visit us, until one evening he fell on his knees and said that he loved me, and asked me to be his wife."

"And you, Eva—and you?"

Hope spoke so impressively, with such intense agitation, that Eva, startled, looked up again. His face was very pale, and his lips seemed to quiver. His words were still ringing in her ears: "And you, and you?" Involuntarily she put her hand close to his, her eyes widened in sudden surprise, and she drew a quick, sharp breath.

"He was the first who had been kind, Hope, and I thought that I loved him," she answered apologetically; "and I only promised that if in some future time he thought the same of me, he might——. What is the matter, dear Hope?"

"Nothing, my child, nothing," he answered, getting up and striding hastily across the room. "Of course it is quite unlikely that Mr. Doyle should know anything of your early days."

"Hope," said Eva, getting up and crossing over to him, "is it because you dislike Mr. Doyle that you are angry with me for having accepted him?"

"I angry? I have no right to be angry with you, Eva. I sincerely trust Doyle may be all you prove worthy of your love, my child." He spoke very gravely now, and again took her hand in his. "Do you know that I feel as if I have known you for years, and I feel so much interest in your welfare that you are never out of my thoughts for long. Your future is much happiness in having your society, the society of one who is to me like a sister, since mine is so far away, and whom I rarely see. Mine has been more or less an isolated existence since I left college, before I obtained a curacy

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ Letters seeking information applied to only through this department; no answers by mail.

J. A. De G., Brooklyn.—1. Base ball is played with four, three, and six on the table, and adding thereto the ace from his hand, call the pile "sevens." He is then combining, not building. 2. Having played a dense from his hand or to a five on the board, and combined to seven, A could not, after B has played an ace, add that ace to the pile of seven and make it eight. That, technically, would be building. Furthermore, it would be building from the board, which is not permissible, nor is it permissible for a player to build up his own combination. Even if A had held an ace, he could not have played it on the seven; but if B had raised the seven to eight, A with his ace could have raised it to nine, as his own combination would then have been built upon by B.

C. K. P.—A dispute has occurred, which is left to you for decision. Speaking of Sexton's run of 287 in Philadelphia, one party asserts that he had six chances more to make such a run in Philadelphia, when he played nine games of 300 points, than in the tournament at Irving Hall, where he plays three games of 600 points. The other party claims that he had but three more chances in Philadelphia, as three games of 600 points are equal to six of 300. Neither is correct. Sexton has scored eight hundred and fifty-two more chances to run 287 in the Irving Hall tournament, where he has 969 chances in all, than in Philadelphia, where he had but 117.

Spec, Philadelphia.—I. The cancan was first danced in the United States at the Arch-street Theatre, Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 26, 1866, by Howard Paul and another, in the ballet of The Lady of the Lake. We cannot say when Rose and Fanny Lucille first danced it. 3. The bet is very loosely worded, but, giving it a liberal construction, we presume that by paying all of the bets of money, first deducting a fixed sum, mutually agreed upon and technically called "expenses." 2. $350 per week is the largest salary we ever knew an actor to receive for an entire season.

Doc Town, Texas.—The Sharps, Tenn., died in Mount Airy, N. C., Jan. 17, 1874. It is the opinion of eminent surgeons, who made a post-mortem examination of their bodies, that they could not have been separated while living, without causing the death of one or both of them.

First Base, Providence.—Mr. B wins, if the club known as the Tauntons did not, on the day named, play with the Rhode Islands. If the Tauntons did so played, that fact has weight only as satisfying both parties that A was wrong.

Fireman.—1. The laws governing the point vary in different localities, and exemption in New York does not mean exemption in Helena. 2. Where there is eligibility to exemption, the fireman's papers are sufficient.

J. C. P., Boston.—You can put an ace from your hand on to five and a four on the board, provided you have a ten, and provided you had not previously called the five and four a nine.

Constant Reader, Nashville.—1. B would lose had the bet been decided a draw. 2. Under a specific rule of the turf relative to dead heats, it might be a draw, or it might be that Bill would lose. Ordinarily, it would be a draw.

Constant Reader, Chicago.—The 1,000,000,000 are enumerated as one billion, four hundred and fourteen millions, sixty-eight thousand, five hundred and thirty-seven dollars and fifty-two cents.

W. H. Ja.—The advertised games between the Cincinnati and Lowell and Osceola and St. Cloud Clubs did not, we believe, take place. The Androscoggins were defeated by the Lowells. (See result elsewhere in this issue.)

James Clarke, Pawtucket.—1. Thirty minutes are considered very fair for the fifty eggs, but we have no record of best time accomplished. 2. We do not know where you could obtain one of Heenan's and one of Sayers' colors.

R. S., Troy.—Lent is not observed as a fast day. Sallie Swift is performing with Tony Pastor's Traveling Combination, under the name of Lurline the Water Queen. 3. He has been temporarily absent from the city.

Matrimony.—If the pin was removed only two inches from its spot, it is to be counted for the last striker, even though it is not down. Otherwise, it is to be spotted, unless the player who struck it has built for which he had thought, agreed to a proposition to take down the stakes, and accept a fac-simile of the original bet.

Old Bell, Chicago.—It is very likely that the bell rang on July 4, 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was made, and again on July 8, 1776, when the Declaration was read to the populace from the Observatory in Statehouse yard. We would not undertake to decide that the bell rang on July 4, and not on July 8, or vice versa.

C. H. B., Boston.—1. At six-card cribbage A plays a 4, B a 6, and A a 5, and claims a run of 3, which B disputes. Who is correct? 2. In a hand of cribbage A turns a deuce, and a heart turned up can one count a flush, and, if so, how much?".....1. A; who should also take 2 points for the 15. 2. No.

Conrad Reader, Albany.—1. Assistance being prohibited, C, in saying he ordered up his partner, incurred the penalty of having to play alone. 2. Assistance being prohibited, the penalty for a question saying that he assists is that he himself must go alone. The dealer cannot go alone on his partner's exposure of hand.

Irving Hall.—"What is the odds of placing the four players in the billiard tournament in the place—that is, first, second, third and fourth?".....Theoretically, the odds is fifteen to one against so placing them. The odds practically cannot be determined, for the reason that the four players are not of equal speed.

T. M., Fort Wancan.—1. Actors like those you name do not receive fixed salaries. They share equally with the manager in the gross receipts, minus certain sums, first deducting a fixed sum, mutually agreed upon and technically called "expenses." 2. $350 per week is the largest salary we ever knew an actor to receive for an entire season.

Doc Town, Texas.—The Sharps, Tenn., died in Mount Airy, N. C., Jan. 17, 1874. It is the opinion of eminent surgeons, who made a post-mortem examination of their bodies, that they could not have been separated while living, without causing the death of one or both of them.

First Base, Providence.—Mr. B wins, if the club known as the Tauntons did not, on the day named, play with the Rhode Islands. If the Tauntons straight heats with Spotted Colt, beating Charley Green and Crown Prince in 2:22, 2:20, 2:20½. A regular meeting will soon be arranged and announced.

AT MYSTIC PARK, Boston, Mass., on Saturday, June 10, five races were trotted, which afforded a good day's sport. The first, for a purse of $50, was won by Bay George, beating Jim Fisk and Lady Lawrence. Bay George took the first, third and fifth heats, Jim Fisk the second, and Lady Lawrence the fourth; time, 2:42, 2:43½, 2:42, 2:42, 2:42. The second trot, for a similar purse, was won by Polly, in harness, beating Lady Tim, to wagon, and Little Humes, in harness; both distanced in the second heat; time, 2:53, 2:47. A match for $50 was won by Levering's John Mills, beating Miller's Rakeafter in four heats, the latter taking the third heat; time, 2:50, 2:50, 2:50, 2:49½, 2:48. A purse and stake of $100 was won by Bigley's Lady Grace, beating Jennie Thompson (who took the second heat), and Ashton Boy, in 2:40, 2:34, 2:38, 2:38. A similar purse and stake was won by Haight's Arthur T., beating Lady Keenan and Nellie Star, in five heats; Nellie Star winning the first heat, Lady Keenan the third, and Arthur T. the second, fourth and fifth heats and the race; time, 2:42, 2:49, 2:43½, 2:43¼, 2:44.

GOLDSMITH MAID VS. TIME.—On Friday, June 9, Goldsmith Maid made her second attempt on Belmont Park, Philadelphia, to beat her own best time of 2:14, made at Mystic Park, Boston. The track is a new one, and 18 feet over the mile, and the prevalence of a strong wind militated against the mare's success, who, besides, was not fully up to the mark. In the first trial the Maid trotted the first quarter in 36sec., the half mile in 1:08, and the mile in 2:17½. In the second attempt she reached the quarter-pole in 32½sec., the half mile in 1:05½, the three-quarters in 1:41½, and the full mile in 2:16½. The third trial was made, but without hopes of a successful issue, the mare trotting the first quarter in 35 seconds, the half mile in 1:11, and the mile in 2:25. The timers were Messrs. Alden Goldsmith, Senior, of Madison Square, and W. Blanchard. The starting judge, Mr. George Sturges.

RACING IN CALIFORNIA.—At the Spring Meeting of the Sacramento Jockey Club, which commenced on Wednesday, June 7, the mile-and-a-half handicap race was won by Billy Newell in three heats, beating Lady Amanda (who won the first heat), Golden Gate, Bradley, Emma Scroggs, Turf Gallery and Revelli; time, 1:43½, 1:46¾, 1:46.

THE PRIZE OF PARIS.—The race for the Grand Prix de Paris, of 100,000 francs, took place June 11, on the Long Champs, in the Bois de Boulogne, Paris, France. The attendance was immense. The race was won by Count Lagrange's colt Boiard, the record winner of the English Derby. He came in four lengths ahead, Enguerrande second, and Mondaine third. Twelve horses started; but at no time was the result uncertain. The winner, as at Epsom Downs, was rode by Maidment. The betting at the start was five to two on him, and ten to one against any other horse.

THE MUSTANGS were exhibited to the gaze of Philadelphians and visitors to the big exhibition on Monday, June 5, when John Francis was credited with riding sixty-five miles in 2h. and 30m., performing seventy-five horses on Suffolk Park. On the 7th George Parker attempted to ride 90 miles in four hours, using twenty animals, and the judges gave the time as 3h. 57½m. when the ninetieth mile was finished.

THOMAS HEWETT, one of the principal breeders of blooded stock in England, died at his residence, Hunter's Hall, Gateshead, May 24, in the seventy-sixth year of his age. His annual sales at York always constituted one of the features of the August meeting.

FRANCISCO PERALTO had another turn at the mustangs at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia, June 10, he undertaking to ride 150 miles in seven hours, changing horses. The time given was 6 hours and 50 minutes.

PHILADELPHIA vs. ALLEGHENY.

The Pearls journeyed from the Centennial City to Pittsburg, Pa., last week, and on the 9th inst. brought up at Union Park, where they met the matched nine against the Allegheny Club. The contest excelled anything previously witnessed in that vicinity this season; and had it not been for bad play behind the bat on the part of the local nine, a closer score would have been recorded, as the visitors were batting their only run in the second inning off the bad, throwing of Crowley. The runs scored by the visitors were all the results of errors.

THE LYNN (MASS.) TOURNEY.—The second annual tournament of the Lynn Association will be held at the West Lynn grounds, commencing Saturday, July 1. The following prizes will be offered: First prize, $500; second prize, $300; third prize, $200; fourth prize, $150; fifth prize, $100; a total of $1,250. The rules will be that each club shall play one game with every other club, and the one winning the largest number of games to take the first prize; the next largest, the second; the third largest, the third, etc., entries to close Saturday, June 24. The tournament will be open to all amateur clubs.

ATHLETIC vs. XANTHA.—The Athletic Club of Mansfield, O., were in part consoled for their defeats by the Allegheny and Braddock Clubs by the result of their game with the Xanthas of Allegheny, Pa., June 8, when they scored a victory, as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9

LOUISVILLE vs. BOSTON.

The result of the third contest between the clubs mentioned above was a defeat for the Reds, who were thereby set back to the sixth place in the ranks of the clubs contending for the League championship pennant. In this contest the home nine did more with Devlin's pitching than in either of the two previous matches with the boys from Old Katnituck, and had they performed as well in the field as at the bat, it is more than probable that victory would have been theirs; but a succession of damaging errors again brought them out of the end of the horn opposite to that at which their friends thought they should have emerged. The Louisvilles began by marking down one in the first inning, Hague being given a base on called balls, and scoring off a fumble by Manning, after being advanced by like work on the part of Leonard. The Boston's turn did not come until the third inning, when they got square, thanks to a brace of two-base hits by Wright and O'Rourke, the side going out before the latter could score. The visitors were whitewashed in this inning, but in the next they got another tally, Somerville making a base-hit (the first by the Louisvilles), and getting around on Morrill's bad throw, which O'Rourke was slow to handle. Until the eighth inning each side now went on in one-two-three order, but then the Kentuckians put in a couple more, giving them a lead of three and banishing hope from the breasts of the Bostonians. Allison hit well for a base, got second by Murnan's failure to hold the ball when sharply thrown by Schafer, and came scampering home from Leonard's bad muff of Ryan's safe ball, thrown in by Manning. In the meantime Ryan got to the second bag, and through McBride's inattention was quickly roosting on third. Morrill failed by bad throwing in an attempt to cut him down here, and the runner landed himself in the right spot, making the closing run for his side of the house. In the ninth the Reds made a determined effort to turn the tide, but couldn't quite succeed, though managing to secure two additional runs, both of which were earned. Murnan and Manning took their bases on safe hits, and the good batting of Morrill, Schafer, Whitney and McBride, each of whom secured a base, sent them around. Wright went to the bat, the bases being all occupied, and struck an easy one to Somerville, who tapped McBride and threw Wright out at first, the double play causing Schafer's run to count nix.

CARBONDALE vs. MODOC.

On the Union Grounds at Carbondale, Pa., June 9, was played a model game between the Carbondales and Modocs, the former playing four "subs.," and being defeated in consequence. The game proved to be the cleanest and sharpest ever played in that city, we believe, and was the first defeat Carbondale has received at the hands of an amateur club this season.

Clubs wishing to secure games with Carbondale during its proposed tour through New York State must send in their guarantees at once.

PHILADELPHIA vs. ATHLETIC.

In a game between these Philadelphia clubs on Monday, June 5, neither side scored until the fourth inning, when the Phillies got one after Zettlein, Meyerle and Sutton had lost chances for double plays. In the next inning the score was thus offset by their opponents, who, for the only time during the contest, got effectually on to Weaver's pitching, making four base-hits and scoring their only runs in the game. A two-baser by Schafer and a passed ball of Malone's gave the Philadelphias another run in the sixth, and they took the lead in the eighth inning by making three runs on errors by Sutton, Malone and Meyerle, following it up in the last inning by a single on an error of Wright's, and safe hits by Stahr and Schafer.

LIVE OAK vs. TAUNTON.

A second championship game was played between these Massachusetts clubs at Lynn June 10, some 1,500 spectators attending. Householder made a home-run in the third inning, sending the ball over the right-field fence. The run in the Tauntons' fifth inning was earned, and that in the sixth also, the latter on a fumble by Shattuck.

THE FRANKLIN TELEGRAPH COMPANY of Philadelphia will have to overhaul some of their operators. A telegram, giving report of game between the Philadelphia and Athletic Clubs, on the 5th inst., was handed to the operator in charge of the wire within the ball-grounds, with instructions to send the dispatch to THE CLIPPER immediately. The operator put the report in his pocket, and that was the last of it.

OLIVE VS. BLUES.—On the 4th inst. these clubs, the former composed of white and the latter of colored athletes, played at St. Louis, Mo., with the following result:

HARTFORD vs. ST. LOUIS.

Upon another page we print an account of the opening game between the Hartford Club and the strong nine of the St. Louis Browns, wherein the Nutmeg team won by a count of 8 to 4. On the 8th inst. their second encounter took place, and this time the score was lowered, but still the Hartfords stood to the fore, and two to one was, as before, the way in which the result was achieved. The home nine, in the fourth inning, obtained two unearned runs on a single by Ferguson and an error by Outhbert, assisted by good base-running and Bond's hit, sacrificing himself to bring in the last of the two runs. Hits by Burdock and Remsen and a passed ball added one in the fifth inning, and hits by Higham and Ferguson, and errors by Blong and Pike, did the same in the sixth. In the eighth, on a single hit by Remsen, an error by McGeary, and another sacrifice hit by Bond, a run was scored. In the ninth the lead was increased by one run on a three-base hit by York, and a two-base by Mills. In the seventh Harbidge had his hand badly split by a foul-tip hit from Pike's bat, which nearly tore out the third finger of his left hand. In six of the innings the visitors were put out in numerical order as they came to the bat. They scored in the sixth on a single base-hit by Dehlman, with errors by Higham, Carey and Harbidge, two unearned runs, and in the ninth earned a single on safe hits by Cuthbert, Clapp and Pike. The score:

A WAIL FROM THE CENTENNIAL.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"APPETITE BILL" TO "OUR JIM."

Oh, darn the Exposition! Jim, the thing's so mighty fine
That it's ruined all the other shows; I know it's killin' mine.
I've got a good location—music playing all the time—
And the people think it's splendid, but they don't lay down a dime!

I've got the best wax-figure ever made of Charley Ross;
You talk about your "learned pigs"—why, "pard," I own the hoss!
The way that beast plays "seven-up" I'm sure would make you weep;
But there aint no one to play to, so he takes it out in sleep!

Just think of my expenses! Why, the ground-rent every day
Clean out the most of my receipts, and there's "the gang" to pay.
The opposition's pilin' in; of "biz" they want the "heft:"
But, it's my opinion, "pardy," that they'll all of 'em "get left."

My "giant" came near "croakin" too—the business knocked him flat;
I had to "bounce" the "skeleton," he got so awful fat.
I tried to "work" the Sunday-schools, and get 'em to the show;
But the deacons "wouldn't have it," so of course it was "no go!"

Perhaps the luck may take a change; I only wish it would.
No doubt there'll be a little time when business will be good;
But then that aint the kind of trade a showman cares to seek.
This lush! money here for months, to make it for a week!

When you come to Philadelphy, bring some parrots, three or four—
I need another monkey, too—*run on and see me sure;
There's lots of the profession here—they know you, every one,
And if we haint much money, why, we'll have a heap of fun!†

*This bass & skanderlus attemp at wit cums of 'lowin unexpereeants poets to git into the paper.—OUR JIM.
†I've got plenty of munny, & I don't micks with no sich menadgry.—OUR JIM.

HOW I LEFT THE PROFESSION.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY GEORGE DUDLEY LAWSON.

Business was awfully bad for the theatrical profession all over the country that Fall, but especially so for the little companies without a substantial backing, who made the rounds of the insignificant towns of Ohio and Indiana, starving on ill-bolstered hope, and keeping up and together in sheer desperation. By a succession of shifts and manœuvres—sometimes rising to the dignity of diplomacy; at others, partaking strongly of the character of artful dodging—the manager of one of those struggling, strolling troupe brought his band of miserables and bundles of traps to the pretty town of Tollin, in the centre of the Buckeye State. The best of everything, which he and his people had started out with, including actors and properties, was dribbled along the route, and the nine months' season, so boastingly predicted, and upon which engagements had been predicated, was just expiring at the end of the ninth week. Of the actors, only three male and two female artists remained, while a bill trunk here, a bale of scenery there, and trunks of wardrobe at other places, were left, like the woodman's blazes, to mark the course.

Manager Sevilloy's Grand Metropolitan Combination and New York Star Comedy Company was about to prove itself another of the disastrous ventures and die at Tollin; and he and we knew it just as well before we struck the town as we did while ruminating, in dreadful pawn, awaiting the advent of his imaginary brother with the usual mythical stuff contributed by a rich admirer, whose faith in future success was to be put in the form of honest greenbacks. The "ghost" had not walked for four weeks, though some of us credited the manager with such sums as forty cents and such items as new shoes or packing, and the available capital of the concern, when we reached our final stand, was one dollar and a quarter. Sevilloy, with keen perception and honest avowal, the very first of the season told us that it would be "either a gold watch or a wooden leg" at Tollin; we had the hall for three nights the place was rated a very good show town, the printers were busy, the advertising and characters, too, we found them in our extremity), the weather was splendid, and, if we could get out with fifty dollars, even, our troubles would be ended, for we could lay off, if nothing better, for a fortnight, when the country fairs began, and then we would have a fine field without rivals, in which moderate success was certain.

gave us, as an inducement to make one more kick; and, having no other resource, we consented.

The gold watch did not show up; but the wooden leg stuck prominently forth the very first evening, and so completely knocked the bottom out of the box-office that our last remaining one dollar, added to the receipts, didn't pay rent and dilicet, to say nothing of the other bills which loomed up. The landlord of the Farmer's Rest was a good-natured German, and, either from faith or charity, he could not, after the evening's experience, hope for present payment; he cheered us with lager, pretzels and "limp" sausage, and "hoped we'd turn pedder in der nex' swi efenings," bade little Fanny Frodsham, our leading lady, erstwhile singing chambermaid, "nefer mind dose leetle drawpacks, and took unter glass pier," and generally conducted himself like a Dutch angel, without harp or crown for the time being. When I was after a hour for retiring, and none of us had heard enough to propose going into the dark and solit..de, Zimmerman, our host, came into the sitting-room where we were, and asked us if we would do him a favor.

"Certainly," said Sevilloy for us all; "anything under heaven, and glad of the chance."

"Vell, you see, it aint mooch; ober id's all a same tousand dollars, of you vas do it to oplize me. Dere is a frient of mine unt he vants me to interojuce him by your combany, dot efening, ober you vos not going right away to ped quick. Nice man; I like him, unt guess you will too. Is dot all right?"

Only little Fanny begged to be excused; but we overcame her scruples and disinclination, and she consented to be so much of a martyr for the sake of making interest with the landlord, and we accordingly told Zimmerman to go ahead with his presentation.

Our new acquaintance proved to be a young man of easy bearing, good-looking, and a clever conversationalist; his name was given as Morrill; he had been in Cincinnati for some years, but was now rusticating, while a little affair in the city was adjusting itself. I can't say for the rest of the company, but Fanny and I took an instant dislike to him for his assumption of importance and the light regard he paid to an evident disgrace, making it a subject rather for boasting than regret. The visit passed off as such visits do; he was liberally inclined, and we inclined to allow him any reasonable latitude in the matter of expense; he patronized the landlord, Sevilloy and we actors, and was graciously condescending to Fanny Frodsham and Jennie Allison. The early cock threatened us with dawn before we separated, and Morrill, shaking hands with everybody, announced his determination of calling during the afternoon, and promised to wake the boys up and bring them out strong in the evening.

The second night closed the season. It was useless to struggle against manifest destiny, and Sevilloy announced to us that the jig was up, and that those able and disposed might as well walk out of town first as last. He had come into possession of twelve dollars of the evening's receipts, and, like the really self-sacrificing man he was, offered to share it amongst those who wanted to get away. After consultation, the three members of the company who had the most pluck took four dollars each and started anew to seek their fortunes, whilst the manager, Fanny and myself, general utility, waited, as did the great and good Micawber, for something to turn up. I noticed that Jack Vincent and Fanny disappeared for a full hour before the three left us, but thought nothing more of it than that they were especially warm friends; though I had been short and constantly in their society, I had never seen or heard anything tender or lover-like between them, and, with the assurance as to my single-heartedness of their friendship, Jack bought a ticket for as far towards Chicago as his pile would allow, and the others turned their faces towards Cincinnati; we three who remained sat down to running into debt and a brave reliance on impossible contingencies.

A week passed away and Sevilloy's help was still a-coming. Every day and evening, Morrill was at the Farmers' Rest. At first Fanny had persistently refused to see him, but Zimmerman complained to Sevilloy that he thought his very good friend Morrill should not be treated so indifferently, and, to save annoyance, Fanny had to go to the parlor and receive the visitor by the hour, though she confessed to me that only consideration for her companions in misfortune induced her to the course. At last, on the ninth day of our sojourn, Fanny called me aside from Sevilloy and asked:

"Harry! can't you see what is going on?"

"I am not unusually blind," was my reply, "but I confess I see nothing out of the way, except our cursed situation."

"What do you suppose makes the landlord so complaisant in allowing us to stay, and you men folks to chalk up unlimited beers?"

"Sevilloy's specious promises, his own good-nature, and a calm trust in Providence."

"No, Harry; Morrill has become security for the bill."

"If he is so flush, and in such good credit, why doesn't he save his wealth from unknown impairment by advancing at once enough to take us all out of this confounded hole?"

"Can't you see it, Harry? Savilloy has propounded the question to him. Zimmerman has offered to lend any reasonable amount on Morrill's endorsement; but he won't consent. He visits this house constantly. Oh! Harry, need you ask more?"

"I see it," was my reply, my eyes suddenly opened; "poor girl, we are in his toils. But I never would suspect the landlord of being party to such traffic. Have you spoken to Savilloy?"

"What use? He is hand-in-glove with that bad man, and swears by him. The landlord is too innocent and too stupid to comprehend the situation, and I have only you to look to, now that Jack is gone. I shall tell you a secret, Harry, known only to ourselves. I am Jack's wife."

"You to Zimmerman, and let him know."

"Not for the world. He would consider you impertinent, and would not believe a word against Morrill. I dare not speak, for women are supposed to invite whatever advances they receive. We can only wait and watch."

Not so I. Before Jack went away he told me where a letter would be likely to reach him, and I sat down at once and wrote him to come or send money enough to take Fanny to him. In explanation I was obliged to own that Fanny had confessed her marriage; but I put my solicitude and hers on the ground of her impatience and pining. In answer, Jack himself walked into my room at the Farmers' Rest, at midnight, on the third day thereafter. He had borrowed just enough to bring him to Tollin.

"Why, Jack! what brings you here?" was my astonished query.

"Harry, old chum, I saw just enough, before I went away, to take alarm at your letter. You needn't think to fool me; a husband's heart is too quick for such a slow dodge. I'll wring that lying turn-pedder in der nex' swi efenings," bade little Fanny Frodsham, our leading lady, erstwhile singing chambermaid, "nefer mind dose leetle drawpacks, and took unter glass pier," and generally conducted himself like a Dutch angel, without harp or crown for the time being. When I was after a hour for retiring, and none of us had heard enough to propose going into the dark and solit..de, Zimmerman, our host, came into the sitting-room where we were, and asked us if we would do him a favor.

AQUATICS.

ATLANTIC YACHT CLUB REGATTA.

With the annual regatta of this club, held on Tuesday, June 6, the yachting season in this vicinity was fairly opened, and under most favorable auspices too, the sky being almost cloudless and the breeze coming steady and strong from the northwest, so that the craft participating had a very good opportunity to show what they, with proper handling, were capable of accomplishing. The yachts starting—eleven in all—were divided into three classes, the first being for schooners, the second for first-class sloops (cabin sloops of 40 feet and over on the water-line), and second-class sloops (cabin sloops under 40 feet on the water-line). A prize was offered to the first boat in, on time allowance, in each class, and in addition the Livingston Memorial prize was awarded to the first yacht of the first-class sloops to reach the home stakeboat, regardless of time allowance, said prize to be held on the conditions of presentation. The respective courses sailed over were: For schooners and first-class sloops—from the anchorage off Bay Ridge, L. I., to and around the stakeboat at Southwest Spit (on buoy 8½), thence to and around lightship, rounding the same by eastward and southward, thence home, going to southward and westward of beacon on Romer Shoal—forty miles. For second-class sloops the same course, to and around stakeboat at Southwest Spit (on buoy 8½), thence to and around a stakeboat near a buoy in Gedney Channel, rounding the same from the southward, thence home—thirty-two miles. The yachts taking part were:

Name.	Owner.	Mean Length.	Allowances.
SCHOONERS.
Peerless	J. R. Maxwell	70ft. 9in.	Allows
Triton	G. A. Thayer	65	6
Agnes	L. A. Fish	57	9
FIRST-CLASS SLOOPS.
Undine	Brasher & Fowler	52	9
Orion	William Cooper	50	6
Sadie	W. E. Greenleaf	48	9
Madcap	E. Busk	45	0
SECOND-CLASS SLOOPS.
Kaiser Wilhelm	W. H. Field	40	9
Nimbus	L. H. Bigelow	35	3
Curlew	Gouvern'r Kortright	29	3
Barbara Frietchie	John H. Rhodes	24	3

It was the first of the ebb-tide when at 10:51 A. M. the second gun sent away the schooners, and nine minutes later the sloops received the signal to follow them across the line, from which the time was taken to a flying start. They went across in the following order and time, the schooners carrying main and foresail, jib, flying jib and working foretopsail, and the sloops generally under mainsail, jib and jibtopsail:

Triton	10h.	57m.	30s.	Madcap	11h.	05m.	28s.
Agnes	10	59	45	Sadie	11	06	05
Peerless	11	00	12	Kaiser	11	06	30
Undine	11	03	47	Nimbus	11	07	00
Orion	11	04	50	Curlew	11	08	00

The changes in position were few during the run to the Southwest Spit, the Triton leading the way in handsome style, while the Peerless wrested the second place in line from the Agnes of the first-class sloops. The Undine continued to hold her own, but the Orion had to give way to the Madcap, whose club-topsail finally made her hum, the Sadie having lost distance. No alteration occurred in the order of the second-class boats, but the Kaiser Wilhelm clearly demonstrated her superiority over the others in her class by opening up a long patch of daylight, though the distance between her and the Nimbus was also so great as that separating the latter from the Curlew. Had the Orion not met with a serious mishap after leaving Hoffman's Island in the rear—her topmast being carried away, and some time elapsing before the wreck could be cleared—she would have given a better account of herself, though it is doubtful if she would have been able to outsail the Undine. The Spit was rounded as under:

Triton	12h.	00m.	00s.	Orion	12h.	14m.	00s.
Peerless	12	03	30	Sadie	12	16	00
Agnes	12	04	00	Kaiser	12	19	00
Undine	12	10	45	Nimbus	12	23	00
Madcap	12	13	00	Curlew	12	28	00

Spreading her canvas after squaring away, the Triton, handled in a workmanship manner, stood away for the Hook, determined to make the most of the lead she had secured. Outside the Hook the bosom of Old Ocean heaved but little, and, the wind falling off, it became advisable to let the muslin, under the pressure of which the yachts picked up considerably in speed, the boats deriving, probably, the most benefit from the increase being the sloops Undine and Madcap, the former cutting down two minutes on the Agnes of the schooners, and the Madcap, though being left farther astern by the Undine, gaining considerably on the Orion and Sadie, who were on even terms. They went around the lightship as follows:

Triton	1h.	10m.	15s.	Madcap	1h.	22m.	30s.
Peerless	1	13	30	Orion	1	27	00
Agnes	1	13	15	Sadie	1	27	00
Undine	1	18	00

In turning, the Orion jibed around inside of the Sadie, the vessels having a narrow escape from a collision. For a few minutes the Sadie led, but the Orion then went off under her lee and assumed her old position as third of her class, which was not afterwards taken from her. The stiffening wind made the smaller craft trim down their cambric pretty well, as well as look after their upper sticks, while the big fellows also had reason to shorten sail for a while. The excellent sailing qualities of the Undine before the wind were now satisfactorily shown, the bowling along grandly, and for some distance showing the way to the Agnes of the schooners. In the meantime the second-class sloops had rounded the Gedney's Channel buoy, as below shown, and were homeward bound.

Kaiser	12h.	54m.	00s.	Curlew	1h.	03m.	00s.
Nimbus	1	00	00

During the run home the wind held fresh, and the pace at which the yachts were going made the contest more than usually interesting. The Triton continued to lead, and as they neared home the race between her and the Agnes (to whom she had to give 7min. 40sec.) excited much interest, it being thought that the small vessel would get inside her allowance, and snatch victory from the grasp of the leader. Sharp manœuvring was indulged in by the sailing-masters of both craft, but the Triton, who kept up her powerful lead, while the other vessels in her class could not stagger along under the extra pressure, maintained her advantage, and as they ran into the Narrows she had minutes to spare and her friends were at ease. The home stakeboat was passed in the following order and time:

SCHOONERS.

	Arrived.	Actual Time.	Corrected Time.
Triton	4h. 49m. 30s.	5h. 56m. 00s.	5h. 46m. 20s.

Nimbus	4 14 57	5 07 32	4 58 13
Curlew	4 17 25	5 09 25	4 48 23

The winners in their respective classes were the Triton, Madcap and Curlew, while the Undine is rewarded for her fast sailing by receiving the Livingston Memorial prize.

REGATTA OF THE NEW YORK YACHT CLUB.

This chief among the numerous yachting regattas which are annually held on the waters of New York Bay was sailed on Thursday, June 8; and though there was lacking the very stiff breeze which the more venturesome among the amateur sailors hope for on these occasions, there still was plenty of wind to enable all but the largest craft to give a satisfactory exhibition of their sailing qualities, which the little 'uns had all they could attend to from first to last, and at times rather more than they required. Taken all in all, the regatta may certainly be said to have been lacking in none of the elements of success which have made preceding similar aquatic meetings so enjoyable and well remembered. That the public had not lost interest in the affair, nor were deterred by the stringency in the money market from indulging in their customary sample of life on the ocean wave, was made manifest by the large number of steamers, tugs, steam-yachts and other vessels which gathered at the starting-point, all crowded with sight-seers, and some provided with the welcome accompaniment of brass bands, whose melodious efforts added not a little to the pleasure of the occasion. The stately William Cook was again chartered as the club steamer, and on board were the members and guests, including the usual throng of fashionably-attired ladies. The entering vessels in the five classes were:

Coming

The course was from the club-house on Staten Island to channel-buoy No. 10, passing to the westward and southward thereof, thence to Southwest-spit buoy No. 8½, keeping to the westward and southward, thence to and around Sandy-hook lightship, keeping it on the starboard hand, and return over the same course, but finishing off buoy 15, below Staten Island bluff. The start was a flying one, time being taken as the vessels crossed a line between the stakeboat and the William Fletcher, on board of which were the judges and members of the press. The wind at the time of starting, 11.27:30 A. M., was coming steadily from the southwest, and the young ebb tide was in favor of the participants, who crossed the line in the order and time below given:

The captain of the Addie Taylor afterwards declared that, had she not met with an accident off Staten Island, by which her shrouds were carried away, she would have beaten the Willie for the third-class prize, whereupon the owner of the latter challenged her to another race, which challenge has been accepted.

HARLEM ROWING ASSOCIATION REGATTA.

The annual regatta of this Association will be held on the Harlem River on Saturday, June 17, and as will be observed from the subjoined list of entries, the races programmed promise to be very interesting:

For the Diamond Sculls—Nassau Boat Club, James Wilson; New York Athletic Club, W. E. McCready; Atalanta Boat Club, P. C. Ackerman and Eben Rose.

Junior Sculls—Nassau Boat Club, J. D. Foote and W. Robinson; New York Athletic Club, Waldo Sprague; Atalanta Boat Club, E. Mills, Thomas Scanlon and H. W. Rogers; Nautilus Boat Club, D. W. Hernon.

Pair-oared Race—Nassau Boat Club, F. G. Brown and John A. Walker—substitutes, Lindsay Watson and J. B. Roberts; New York Rowing Club, C. H. Leland and F. L. Leland; New York Athletic Club, W. E. Stowe and R. L. Newton—substitutes, G. C. Barnett and A. H. Wheeler; Atalanta Boat Club, W. E. Eustis and W. H. Downs—substitutes, H. W. Rodgers and E. Blake; Nautilus Boat Club, David Roach and William Walsh.

Four-oared Race.—Columbia College Rowing Association—J. A. Sprague (bow), E. E. Sage, C. E. Boyd, J. T. Goodwin (stroke). New York Athletic Club.—R. W. Rathborne (bow), L. S. Mack, L. C. West, C. H. Cone (stroke); substitutes, A. T. Shand and F. J. Hynes. Atalanta Club.—E. Blake (bow), W. Rodgers, W. H. Downs, W. E. Eustis (stroke); substitutes, P. C. Ackerman, O. T. Johnson and E. Mills Jr.

Six-oared Race.—Nassau Boat Club.—John A. Walker, A. W. Montgomery, A. B. Frost, G. W. Powers, G. S. Floyd Jones and J. Watson; coxswain, W. K. Forster. New York Rowing Club.—J. E. Kingsford, J. A. McKern Jr., R. B. Hartshorne, T. Green, G. Sherman Jr., and W. R. Stewart; coxswain, C. F. Frothingham. Dauntless Boat Club.—J. H. Bates Jr., H. W. Peckwell, C. Knapp, W. B. Morse, C. E. Trotter and W. G. Demarest; coxswain, J. J. Duff. New York Athletic Club.—R. W. Rathborne, L. S. Mack, A. T. Shand, F. J. Hynes, L. C. West and C. H. Cone; coxswain, G. C. Bennett.

The steamers Only Son and William Tittamer will accompany the racers, and the club will also have a double-deck barge moored at McComb's Dam bridge.

THE CENTENNIAL PROFESSIONAL PRIZES.—Jonathan Gillingham, secretary of the Schuylkill Navy, informs us, under date of June 6, that the professional prizes in the international races which are to take place during the Centennial regatta will be as follows: Four-oared shells—First prize, $2,500; second, $1,000. Pairs—First prize, $1,000; second, $500. Singles—First prize, $800; second, $400. These amounts will be increased, should additional subscriptions warrant it. These prizes are certainly liberal enough to induce oarsmen of all countries to have a try therefor, and we look for large fields of first-class men in all of the races, now that those especially interested know precisely what they have to work for, lack of previous knowledge in regard thereto having in many quarters caused indecision and delay in the matter of making up crews, etc.

JAMES PILKINGTON of the Seawanhaka Club of Greenpoint, L. I., and John Hatten of the Friendship Club of this city, pulled a short three-mile turning race, for a gold medal, on the Harlem River, June 5. The latter was the favorite at odds before the start, but the style in which the Long Islander began to cut out the work immediately upon reaching the word caused a change in the market, and ere they had gone a mile any odds could have been had on Pilkington, who won a hollow victory by four lengths, in 29:00.

THE GRAND STEEPLECHASE DE PARIS (handicap) of 30,000 francs, added to a sweepstakes of 500 francs each, was run for at Auteuil, France, on Monday, June 5. Sixteen ran, the winner being Count de St. Saveur's b. c. Ventriloque, by Ventre St. Gris, 4yrs., 140lb; Lord N. Beresford's bk. g. Chimney Sweep, aged, 152lb, second; Mr. Gomm's b. g. Congress, aged, by Compromise, dam Countess, 176lb (the top weight), third.

THE SEABIRD CLUB of San Francisco, Cal., indulged in a yacht race May 27. The Daisy and Bessie tied for the champion flag, and are to sail for it again; the second prize being taken by the Fairy Shell.

THE AMSTERDAM (N. Y.) ROWING ASSOCIATION propose to hold a regatta on the Mohawk River, July 4. J. M. Belding is president, and J. C. Miller vice-president of the club.

THE PARIS CREW.—Fulton and Price o this famous quartet of New Brunswick oarsmen, having received leave of absence from the Customs Department at St. John, N. B., long enough to prepare for and attend the Centennial regatta at Philadelphia, a meeting was held at the Beehive, in said city, on Monday evening, June 5, for the purpose of taking steps toward sending the crew to uphold the honor of that section on the Schuylkill. Dr. Walker was chairman, and J. S. McLaren acted as secretary of the meeting, at which a letter was read from the Mayor, who promised all the aid in his power to further the object aimed at. After an interchange of views, it was deemed advisable to appoint a committee to solicit subscriptions to a fund to be used in defraying necessary expenses, it being estimated that the amount required would not exceed $1,500. A committee of twelve, with Dr. Walker at the head, was accordingly appointed, and there is no doubt that they will succeed in collecting the not very large amount needed. It is probable that the crew will row in both the outrigger shell and inrigged boat race, the ship for the former to be constructed by C. B. Elliott of Greenpoint, L. I., and the latter to be built by Elijah Ross, one of the crew. Pending arrangements, the crew will practice daily in the harbor.

WILLIAM MYERS, the old Delaware-river fisherman, who has gained considerable reputation in the Quaker City for skill in the propulsion of heavy boats, and who, it may be remembered, was some years ago spoken of as a probable opponent of Jimmy Hamill in that class of boats, is now undergoing a course of preparation for shell-rowing at Bridesburg, Pa., under the mentorship of Sam Collyer. We understand that he gives promise of making a first-rate wager boat-puller, and that there is a probability of a match for $500 a side being arranged between him and Frank Kilsby, the English sculler, whom Ellis Ward so easily defeated on Seneca Lake.

THE FARRAGUT BOAT CLUB of Boston, Mass., last week elected the following officers for three months: W. A. Perkins, president; M. J. Dooley, vice-president: R. E. Fuery, captain; J. Visall, treasurer; A. E. McManus, financial secretary; J. J. Lynch, corresponding and recording secretary; W. F. Shaw, E. Visall, G. Hinckley, A. McGilvary, board of directors.

THE FAULKNER-REGAN CREW of Boston, Mass., are now fairly started on the road to the Centennial regatta, an entertainment given for their benefit at Music Hall on Monday evening, June 5, having netted a good round sum, and the subscribed amounts, which will go to swell the fund thus started, will enable them to prepare themselves thoroughly for a long and strong pull for the rich prize which is to reward the winners of the international four-oared race. During the evening the crew appeared on the stage and showed the audience how to row on dry land.

THE WILLIAMSBURG (L. I.) YACHT CLUB are to hold their sixth annual regatta to-day (Tuesday), June 13, to start from the anchorage, Greenpoint, sail to and around the Stepping-stones buoy and return. The Wyoming will accompany the race, leaving Fulton Ferry, Brooklyn, at 8 A. M., and Broome street, New York, 8:30.

JEROME PARK SPRING MEETING.

SECOND DAY—TUESDAY, JUNE 6.

On the second day of the meeting of the American Jockey Club at Jerome Park, on June 6, the attendance was very large, the weather bright, cool and pleasant, and the course in fine order, being safe, if not remarkably fast. The card of racing of the day comprised five events, among them the Westchester Cup and Maryland Stakes, the most important races of the day. The sport commenced with the mile dash, for the Club purse of $500 for horses of all ages; maidens allowed 3yrs., 93lb; 4yrs., 7lb; 5yrs. and upwards, 12lb. Seven horses came to the post when the starting-bell rang to saddle, viz., G. Longstaff's Yorkshire Lass, 3yrs., 98lb; C. S. Lloyd's Asteroid horse, 5yrs., 112lb; D. McDaniel's Australind, 4yrs., 106lb; G. L. Lorillard's Leander, 4yrs., 118lb; Dowell & Cammack's Outcast, 5yrs., 98lb; E. Norton's Janette Norton, 4yrs., 106lb; and M. Donahue's Spindrift, aged, 124lb. Notwithstanding the veteran Spindrift carried the top weight, he looked and moved so well that he was at once installed the favorite when the pool-selling commenced, the rates of prices ruling as follows:

Spindrift	$150	$180	$190	$300
Leander	85	95	105	150
Australind	45	65	60	100
Lloyd's horse	70	90	90	160
Yorkshire Lass	40	60	80	105
Outcast	65	90	100	220
Janette Norton	30	30	20	35

An unequal start was had, Leander and Spindrift getting away some two lengths before the others, with the latter in the lead. Going round the upper turn, Hughes pulled Spindrift back, allowing Leander to carry on the running, in order that he might save the old horse for a final brush, the pursuing horses pumping themselves out in their efforts to overtake the leaders. Before reaching the quarter-pole Leander had opened a gap of two lengths, Spindrift being second, as far before Yorkshire Lass, who was lapped by Outcast and Lloyd's colt. Without any change of positions they ran around the blunt and lower turn, Leander having a clear lead into the homestretch. Half-way between the three-quarter and furlong pole Hughes gave Spindrift his head, and the old chestnut in a few strides collared, challenged and passed Leander (who shut up like a jackknife when pressed), and, galloping on, won very easily by two lengths in 1:46¾; Leander second, three lengths before Yorkshire Lass; Outcast fourth, Australind next, and Janette Norton last of all. Considering the weight carried and the condition of the course, this is a performance worthy of being classed alongside of Climax's feat over this track, when, carrying 148lb., he ran a mile in 1:48.

The Westchester Cup, a sweepstakes of $50 each, play or pay, for all ages, with $1,500 added by the Jockey Club, the second to receive $300 out of the stakes, two miles and a quarter, was the second race of the day. There were penalties for winners, those of a single race amounting to $2,000 to carry 3lb extra; of $3,000, 7lb; of $4,000, 10lb extra. Of the fifteen subscribers to the cup only the following four came to the post: E. A. Clabaugh's Viator, J. A. Grinstead's St. Martin, D. McDaniel's Joe Cerns, and J. S. Cattanach's Leader. The four starters were four-year-olds, and all carried 118lb, under the new scale of weights adopted by the American Jockey Club, which are also adopted by the Monmouth Park and Saratoga Associations. The betting men strongly fancied St. Martin, who last year was considered some pounds the superior horse to D'Artagnan in the same stable, who had won the Travers Stakes at Saratoga. Viator was also stoutly supported, especially by two or three Baltimore gentlemen, who had come on especially to back him, these two horses carrying the bulk of the money in the pool-box. The rates of odds ruled thus:

St. Martin	$300	$750	$600	$200
Viator	625	520	405	235
Joe Cerns	155	100	80	80
Lelaps	100	110	95	45

A good start was had, Joe Cerns jumping off in the lead, with Viator, Lelaps and St. Martin following in the order named. Coming up the stretch from the starting point, which was at the three-quarter pole, Viator outran Joe Cerns, and led him a neck at the judges' stand, Lelaps four lengths behind, and St Martin, running under a pull, last. Viator steadily improved his lead, and at the quarter was three lengths ahead of Joe Cerns, and he held his own and that stiff and along the home-stretch, where Lelaps deprived Joe Cerns of second place; St. Martin still last, but pulling his jockey nearly out of the saddle in his efforts to go past his leading horses. Viator kept up the strong pace he had made until the judges' stand was again reached at the end of a mile and quarter; Lelaps still second, and St. Martin, who had given Joe Cerns the go-by, third. Entering the last mile, Viator improved the pace, and, after passing the quarter-pole, St. Martin, passing Lelaps, became second. Barbee, on St. Martin, now made a determined effort to reach Viator, and as they swung into the home-stretch was within two lengths of him. But now Holloway called upon Viator, who had been running well within himself, and the horse at once responded by increasing his stride, and, stalling off every challenge of St. Martin's, galloped clean away from him, and won, "hands down," by six lengths, in 4:10¾. St. Martin being pulled up when Barbee found that he could not win. The first quarter was run in 27½sec.; the first mile in 1:53; and the two miles in 3:42¾. Joe Cerns beat Lelaps on the post for third place.

WINNERS OF THE WESTCHESTER CUP.

Winners.	Age.	Sire.	Time.	Second.
1867—Sandford's Load-stone	6	Lexington	4:10¾	Onward.
1868—Weldon's Local	5	Lexington	4:06¾	Connelly.
1869—O'Fallon's The Banshee	4	Lexington	4:19¼	Pleasureville
1870—Babcock's Helmbold	4	Australian	4:11	Vespacius.
1871—Sanford's Preakness	4	Lexington	4:18½	Glenelg.
1872—McDaniel's H. Bassett	4	Lexington	4:18¼	Littleton.
1873—Rice's Wanderer	5	Lexington	4:04	True Blue.
1874—Lawrence & Co's Rhyolock	5	Lexington	4:13	Wanderer.
1875—Jennings' Balankeel	4	Asteroid	4:06½	Reform.
1876—Clabaugh's Viator	4	Vaurhall	4:10¾	St. Martin.

The Maryland Stakes, for fillies three years old, $100 entrance, half forfeit, with $700 added; the second filly to receive $200 out of the stakes. There were forty-four nominations, seven of which came to the post, viz., Mr. Belmont's Sultana, P. Lorillard's Fera, D. D. Withers' Cyclone, P. Lorillard's (F. Morris') Merciless, D. McDaniel's Lulu B., Belmont's Patience, and Doswell & Cammack's Sunbeam. Pools sold as under:

Belmont	$500	$750	$1,100	$400
Lorillard	380	695	900	365
Withers	145	125	100	100
McDaniel	75	105	180	55
Doswell & Cammack	105	120	120	88

The start took place about eighty yards down the homestretch, below the judges' stand, in order to have more room to start the fillies, and the outcome was at the same place. Merciless was first off, when, after some delay, caused by the nervousness and fractiousness of Patience, the flag fell; Sultana and Sunbeam following close after her, Lulu B. fourth, Pera next, Patience sixth, and Cyclone last. Merciless made the pace hot from the start, and was leading Mrs. Stipps' filly at the quarter, when Sunbeam, having passed Sultana, was third. They ran without any change of positions around the club-house bluff, and along the lower stretch, Merciless turning into the straight-run home a clean length before Sultana, and the partisans of the Lorillard stable cheered enthusiastically at their anticipated victory. Hayward now let go his restraining pull on the beautiful sister to Monarchist, and, catching Merciless at every stride, challenged her half way up, and, after a beautiful struggle home, beat her by half a length in 1:47¾. Mercilless only securing second money by a head from Patience, who ran very fast at the finish; Sunbeam was fourth, Pera fifth, and Lulu B. last.

WINNERS OF THE MARYLAND STAKES.

	Sire.	Time.	Second.
1873—Belmont's Olitipa	Leamington	1:49	Ascension.
1874—Belmont's Sultana	Lexington	1:47¾	Merciless.

The mile-and-three-quarter dash for a purse of $600, for all ages, to carry 110lb each, no allowances, had three runners: Mr. Belmont's Olitipa, Capt. Cottrill's Stampede, and Mr. J. O'Donnell's Kildare. Olitipa was a hot favorite, pools selling as follows:

Olitipa	$700	$800	$400	$420
Stampede	150	105	85	110
Kildare	145	105	75	75

Olitipa was in front when the flag fell, but Hayward immediately pulled her back, and allowed Kildare and Stampede to cut out the running, she trailing behind them. Kildare made the pace so hot that after going a mile and a quarter Stampede was done for, and Olitipa took second place. She waited on Kildare until well into the homestretch, when Hayward let her out, and, having her opponent safe in a few yards, she galloped home a winner by two lengths in 3:12¾; Stampede a dozen lengths behind Mr. O'Donnell's colt.

The steeplechase—for a purse of $1,000, of which $200 to second horse—had four runners: Mr. Reed's Trouble, with 180lb, and Point Blank, $140lb; Mr. George Lorillard's Bullet, 165lb; and Capt. Cottrill's Colonel Nelligan, 153lb. Pool-selling was brisk on the race, the last few selling as follows:

Reed's entries	$250	$250	$450	$615
Bullet	225	280	500	600
Colonel Nelligan	75	110	230	300

Gaffney was on Col. Nelligan, Sutcliffe on Bullet (he having purchased the horse on the morning of the race), Little on Trouble, and Meany on Point Blank. Gaffney and Col. Nelligan fell before they had gone half a mile, Sutcliffe on Bullet followed their example; and the race being thus left to Trouble and Point Blank, both owned by the same party, they galloped leisurely over the course, Trouble winning in 4:58¾.

THIRD DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 8.

There was a good attendance present on the third day of the meeting, but the occurrence of the annual regatta of the New York Yacht Club doubtless attracted hundreds who would otherwise have patronized Jerome Park. The course was in admirable condition, the weather bright and clear, with a delightful breeze agreeably tempering the atmosphere, and adding greatly to the enjoyment of the spectators.

The Juvenile Stakes for two-year-olds, $100 entrance, half forfeit, with $400 added, the second horse to receive $200 out of the stakes, a dash of half a mile, was the first race on the card. The stake closed with twenty-six nominations, of which number ten weighed in for the prize, which was worth $2,900. These were H. P. McGrath's Leonard, carrying 110lb., the weights for all exclusively two-year-old races; P. Lorillard's Zoo Zoo, dam Mazurka, 107lb; A. Belmont's Hibernia, W. Cottrill's Adventure, T. Puryear's b. f. by Narragansett; G. L. Lorillard's Lucifer and Oleaster, Carr & Co.'s Rifle, H. C. Babcock's Morphine, and P. Lorillard's Idalia. They were a highly-bred lot, the best thoroughbred blood in the country, and a finer-shaped lot of youngsters never faced the starter. McGrath's representative, Leonard, the first of Longfellow's produce that has run East, was such a fine-looking colt that he was made a hot favorite, Mr. McGrath having lots of money from Kentucky partisans to put on him, besides backing him for $1,000 of his own cash. Pierre Lorillard's entry was next in demand, as it was rumored that Billy Brown the trainer had another Faithless in reserve this Spring. Just before the race a sensation was produced by a lottery-man from Bridgeport buying several heavy pools on McGrath's entry at the auction-pool stand, and refusing to pay for them when the demand for the cash was made. He was escorted off the course by two policemen, and, as Messrs. Morrissey & Co. are responsible for all transactions, it was necessary to put up the tickets on McGrath which he had purchased, but not paid for, at auction, when Mr. Morrissey bought them in, thus enabling upon him a loss of over $1,000. The regular auction sales were at the subjoined rates:

McGrath	$800	$600	$1,600
P. Lorillard	500	325	900
Contrill	240	105	300
G. Lorillard	350	110	250
Puryear	150	105	310
Belmont	130	75	300
Field	70	80	180

After four attempts the flag fell to a good start, nearly the whole ten runners being in a line. Hibernia took the lead, followed by Leonard and Adventure, Zoo Zoo, Lucifer, Oleaster and Morphine next, while Puryear's filly and Rifle were last. A cloud of dust enveloped the lot as they swept up the straight quarter from the starting-point, like a squadron of cavalry; but the positions could be clearly distinguished as they entered the home-stretch by the three-quarter pole. There Hibernia was pulled over to the rails, which enabled Idalia to go to the front, Sparkling on the latter dashing through the opening, followed by Hibernia, Adventure and Leonard, on whom Swim was already busy with the whip, but without increasing his speed. Idalia retained her lead throughout, stalling off Brown's challenge on Hibernia, and winning a fine race very cleverly by three lengths in 49½ seconds. Hibernia second, and Zoo Zoo, the stable companion of the winner, third. The next lot were Oleaster, Adventure, Lucifer, Leonard and Rifle, the Minnie Miner filly and Morphine being the whippers-in. The winner is a bright bay, bred by Mr. Sanford, and sold at his yearling sale, in Kentucky, last June, to Mr. P. Lorillard, for $620. She is by imp. Glenelg out of Item, by Lexington out of Katonah, the dam of Tom Ochiltree and Kadi.

The mile-and-race, for a purse of $700, for all ages, entrance money, 5 per cent., to the second horse, had only three runners: McDaniel's Springbok, 124lb; G. Lorillard's Leander, 118lb; and G. Longstaff's Freebooter, 101lb. Although Springbok had only recently returned from California, and had not been long in training, looking fat and lusty as a bullock, he was made a tremendous favorite. Pools sold as follows:

Springbok	$600	$550	$600
Freebooter	205	140	145
Leander	300	265	325

In the first heat Freebooter and Leander made the running, head-and-head with each other, to the quarter-pole, where Hayward brought up Springbok and collared Longstaff's colt, Leander falling back a little to the rear. The first two ran lapped to the far turn, where, to the general surprise, Springbok was seen to fall back suddenly, and Leander passed him. Coming up the homestretch Sparling rushed Leander to Freebooter's head, but he could not hold his position, and the son of Kentucky and Felucca galloped home a winner of the heat by two lengths in 1:48. Springbok came up the homestretch so lame that the distance-flag fell in his face. He had struck his near fore-foot and cut it badly; his starting again is doubtful. In the second heat the betting was $100 to $20 on Freebooter, who took up the running the moment the flag fell, was never headed in the race, which he won in a canter by four lengths in 1:49½.

The mile-and-half dash, for a purse of $500, for all ages, entrance money to the second horse, had four runners: Grinstead's St. Martin, 118lb; Bowie's Oreknob, 118lb; Dowell's Invoice, 106lb; and Lloyd's five-year-old Asteroid-Katona horse, 112lb. The Maryland representative was the favorite, pools selling as follows:

Ore-knob	$1,000	$900	$600
St. Martin	700	540	330
Field	25	245	150

Lloyd's colt, an outsider sold in the field, took up the running when the flag fell, St. Martin and Oreknob racing head-and-head two lengths behind him, and Invoice in the rear. There was no change of position for a mile and a quarter, Lloyd's unnamed colt still retaining his lead until entering the stretch, where Barbee, quitting Ore-knob, made his effort to catch Lloyd's colt, but failed; and, to the uproarious delight of the fielders, the latter won by two lengths in 2:41. The colt was immediately named Partnership, Mr. Sanford and Mr. Lloyd owning him jointly between them.

The mile-and-eighth dash, for a purse of $500, for three-year-olds only, maidens allowed 5lb., had eight runners. These were Mr. Belmont's Bertram, 116lb; P. Lorillard's Pera, 113lb; A. Grinstead's Mettle, 115lb; Doswell & Cammack's Rappahannock, 115lb; D. McDaniel's Vigil, 115lb; W. R. Babcock's Woodland, 115lb; J. H. Racey's Leamington 2d, 115lb; and Carr & Co.'s Viceroy, 115lb. Bertram was the favorite, as the following figures indicate:

Bertram	$410	$410	$410
Mettle	155	195
Rappahannock	90	75	150
Pera	100	100	95
Vigil	70	85	85
The Field	60	90	110

Bertram, who was ridden by Hayward in blinkers, was very unruly at the post, delaying the start some time. Rappahannock took the lead, attended by Pera, Mettle, Vigil, Woodland and Leamington Jr. for some distance, when Bertram moved up, and laid within striking distance until entering the homestretch. Then Hayward called upon him, and he shot to the front, stalling off a brilliant rush of Woodland's, and winning a magnificent race by a head only in the last stride. Time, 2:01, which was at the rate of 1:46 to the mile.

CALEDONIAN GAMES IN CALIFORNIA.

A crowd, numbering over ten thousand people, were present at Badger's Park, Oakland, Cal., on May 27, being attracted thither by the tenth annual picnic and games of the San Francisco Caledonian Club, which in all respects proved completely successful. That the public received, in the way of athletic entertainment, the full value of the money expended may be inferred from the appended list of games, the names of the victors in each competition being given. It will be noted that the prizes represented more money than is usually put out at similar meetings:

Quoits—First prize, gold and silver medal, J. Gutherie; second, silver shield, J. Gilmore.

Throwing the heavy hammer—First prize, gold and silver medal, W. W. McLaren, 71ft.; second, silver shield, Howard Shaw, 68ft. 10in.

Standing jump—First prize, silver cup, J. Donaldson, 9ft. 2in.; second, silver shield, A. McNeil, 8ft. 8¾in.

Throwing the light hammer—First prize, gold and silver medal, H. Shaw, 87ft. 7in.; second, silver shield, J. A. Beverly, 79ft. 3in.

Running jump—First prize, silver cup, J. Donaldson, 15ft. 11in.; second, silver medal, C. Caldwell, 15ft. 3in.

Putting the heavy stone—First prize, black marble clock, R. McGinnis, 30ft. 4½in.; second, silver medal, J. A. Beverly.

Boys' handicap race, twelve years and under—First prize, silver watch, W. Bankhead; second, silver shield, James Erwin; third, pocket knife, J. Peacock.

Putting the light stone—First prize, silver cup

AT THE ODEON VARIETY THEATRE, Newark, N. J., the business during the first part of this week was good; but, owing to the extreme heat of the last few days, fell off considerably. The new comers June 6 were Hattie and Bonnie Grinnell, in a very clever song-and-dance, and later Hattie in a well-executed jig; the Suydam Brothers, fine acrobats and horizontal-bar performers; Eloise Simpson, in a number of well-rendered serio-comic songs; and Nettie Taylor, in the same, that were well received. Ned Wambold reappeared after an absence of four days, and was warmly welcomed. Billy Conway of Healy, Conway and Saunders closed 5th, going to New York. The other closures 10th were John Reilly and the Grinnells and the Suydam Brothers to New York; Healey and Saunders, to Hartford, Ct. Booked for 12 are Millie Payne, Winona Bridges, Connors and Coleman, Matt Greene, Signor Erni and the Sharpley Brothers.....A much-improved business has been noticed at the Metropolitan Theatre this week. On the 5th the new people were Lou Edwards, in serio-comic songs; Charley Burnham, in stump speeches that evoked applause; Fernando Fleury, in character (comic) changes, eliciting hearty applause; Etna Markley, in operatic selections and ballads that were received with marked favor; the Cooper Brothers in excellent acrobatic songs-and-dances; Charley Diamond, in songs-and-dances, accompanying himself on the harp, earning deserved applause; and Marie Dyer, in serio-comic songs. The last-named closed after her first night (5th). Bonnie Bunnells failed to connect. Closed 10: Tyrolean Troupe of Singers, to Philadelphia. Announced for 12: Tommy Fish, Virginia Stickney and the Reagan Brothers. Letter of June 10.

THE FRENCH ARRIVALS at Shelby's, Buffalo, N. Y., June 5, were Andy and Annie Hughes, Signor Fabra and Mlle. Falbony, Walton the musical Punch, Collins and Moore, Allie La Monte, and the Parker Sisters. The Martinetti Pantomime Troupe remained over, and gave "Jocko the Brazilian Ape" for the afterpiece. Business good, notwithstanding the hot weather. An extra matinee 10 at the Academy of Music drew a large audience. Closed 10: Giovanni, Annie and Andy Hughes, Allie La Monte, the Martinetti Troupe, and Parker Sisters, to New York; Walton, to Chicago; Fabra and Mlle. Falbony, to Philadelphia. Billed for 12: Rel Mueab, Christine Percy, the Laverde Sisters, the Fontainbleaus, Lucy Clifton and H. W. Williams, Joe Lang, Lucien Marc, and Wm. Austin....The Comique is being refitted and overhauled, preparatory to a Summer season, under the management of Fred Knapp, Geo. Redmond, and Ed. Barnes.....Harry Sinclair's new variety hall, announced to open this month by THE CLIPPER three weeks ago, has been abandoned. Instead of variety business, it was changed to a sample and ice-cream garden.....At the Centennial a lively business was done with the best company of the season. New arrivals 5 were Nellie Blanchard and Harry Weeks. They closed 10, going to Cleveland. A new company opens 12, Baker and Doyle, Carrie Thorne and Johnny Bartley remaining. Letter of June 11.

THE SUMMER THEATRE COMIQUE, Washington, D. C., did an immense business during the past week. The event of the week was the production of the long-talked-of musical extravaganza from the prolific pen of Ernest Harold, entitled "Gargantua, or the Nation's Guest," with the author in the principal role, Gargantua Kill-em-Kwick. The piece is founded upon the incidents connected with the recent incarceration of Hallet Kilbourn by the House of Representatives, and is replete with enlivening music, beautiful scenic effects, unique properties and antique dresses. It has but few faults, and is refined, ingenious and fascinating. The make-up of Mr. Harold was a perfect copy of Hallet Kilbourn, and his acting was excellent and artistic. The Waite Sisters, who supported the star, surprised everybody by the clever and vivacious manner in which they performed the parts assigned them, being essentially foreign to their specialties. Frank Cushman, in old-time plantation-darky representations, was the only other new attraction of the week. The departures June 10 were Ernest Harold, Minnie Gray, the La Rue Family, Thatcher and Hume, Martinetti Troupe, and Wm. A. Hollobone. The announcements for June 12 are Den Thompson in the burletta of "Joshua Whitcombe," the Richmond Sisters, Julia Wilson, Will H. Morton and Lillie Linden. Advices of June 11.

THE ADELPHI, Toledo, O., presented the following new people June 5: Ella Stowe, in serio-comic songs and in acts with Chas. H. McCaslin; and the Sanyeahs—Samuel and Maud—in their revolving globe and numerous juggling acts. Closing June 10 were Lulu Delmay and Lew Spencer, to Grover's Adelphi, Phila.; the Barlow Bros., to Pittsburg; Erba Robeson, to Detroit; and Flora McDonald, to Chicago. Opening June 12: Conway and Kerrigan, Dixon and Udelle, the Ifferd Sisters, Lizzie Shelton, and John and Blanche Nichols.

AT MCKEE'S CHEROKEE GARDEN, Paterson, N. J., the business was but fair during the past week. Carrie Lewis and Mamie French became quite favorites in their songs. Alice Bennett and Lulu Wentworth well deserved the applause they received. Huber and Glidden in their original acts are very fine, and received a number of encores nightly. Morton and Ryan made quite a hit in their songs-and-dances. On the 19th, J. H. Cooke, the stage-manager, was tendered a complimentary benefit, and the following volunteers appeared: Connors and Coleman, clog-dancers; Prof. Russell, magician; Dan Decher, Dutch songs-and-dances; Loxley and Ganno, gymnasts; Billy Martin, character songs; and James O'Neill, jig-dancer. Departures 10: Alice Bennett and Mamie French, to New York; Lulu Wentworth, to Boston; Carrie Lewis and Morton and Ryan, to Brooklyn; Huber and Glidden and Connors and Coleman, to Newark; J. H. Cooke lays off. No arrivals, as the place closed for a week. Letter of June 10.

THE CHILD AND ANIMAL CURIOSITIES still continue at the Boylston Museum, Boston, Mass., with Walby Gibbs and Bob Sanford as bones, and Tale and Decker as tambos. In the second or variety part, Harry Blanchard exhibits his vocalistic powers, followed by Guy Linton and Kitty Adams in their musical sketches. Tale, Decker, Gibbs and Sanford then perform the "Hamptown Students" burlesque, and Phil Heath made his first appearance in his ventriloquial act. Guy Linton's character changes, the Poole Brothers in their pedestal clog, and Kitty Stanley in motto songs followed, the entertainment closing with the burlesque of "William Tell with a Vengeance".....B. F. Tryon, treasurer of the Howard Athenæum, is to have a benefit to-morrow night, at which Fanny Marsh, Emma Vincent, Ed. Beattie (his first appearance in twelve years), N. C. Goodwin Jr., Yankee Locke, Barney McNulty, Fagan and Redman and others will appear in a choice programme. Advices of June 14.

TONY PASTOR'S THEATRE, now in the twelfth annual tour, will shortly appear for the first time in California, opening in San Francisco June 26.

THE SHOW at Smith's Opera-house, Grand Rapids, Mich., has been a good one, but the attendance has been light, owing to counter attractions. The new people June 5 were Ed. Chrissie, a prime favorite; Minnie Baker, song-and-dance lady, who pleases; Blanche Porter, vocalist; the Morosco Family, gymnasts, who do a fine act; and Rose Doyle, who appears to advantage in classic tableaux. Among the visitors are Mlle. Estelle, to St. Louis, Mo., and Murphy and Mack, who have no engagement. Budworth and Kaye are announced for 12. Letter of June 10.

AT DUPREE & GREEN'S GRAND CENTRAL THEATRE, Jackson, Mich., Gus Warren, Kate Hastings, the Gibbons Sisters, and Dave McCoy are billed for June 12.

FROM THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Cleveland, O., the departures on June 10 were O. B. Collins and Kate Raymond, to Buffalo; Lenton Brothers, to Cincinnati, O.; Clara Sidelle, to Montreal; and Josie Austin, without an engagement. Billed for 12: Walter Bray, John Le Clair, Lizzie Warren, and J. C. Murphy.

THE CLAIRE SISTERS—Minnie and Maggie—are at their home in Detroit, Mich.

JENNIE WADE, Kitty Whitland and Harry Jefferson were the new people at Tooker's Varieties, Norfolk, Va., June 5.

B. B. HART'S management in Pittsburg, Pa., proved disastrous. He lost all the money he had, and left there indebted to his company and orchestra. The various members of the company, by the aid of friends there and by telegraphing for money, got away during the past week. Our correspondent says that Hubert Sexton, the leader of the orchestra Hart brought there, and nearly all of his band are still there.

JOLLY J. NASH, comic vocalist, opens at the Olympic Theatre, this city, June 19. He will return to England Aug. 7, and all communications can be directed care of this office.

A PARTNER with capital is wanted for a variety theatre. See Col. F. Warner's card.

THE BRIAN FAMILY, whose character acting, singing and dancing proved an attractive feature at the Globe Theatre, this city, advertise that they are open for engagements.

JOSEPH ARTHUR, burlesque actor, song-writer, etc.; Frankie Etta, burlesque actress and dancer, and Charles E. Dobson, soloist, have formed a combination for the production of certain burlesques described in another column, and will be ready to accept engagements about Aug. 15.

NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

HAVERLY'S MINSTRELS performed at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., the past week. It is a favorite company in Boston, because in the whole entertainment there is nothing a man need fear to take a lady to see. The singing is capital, and Milt. Barlow is one of the very best of negro comedians. Letter dated June 11.

IRVIN T. BUSH, interlocutor and vocalist, joined Haverley's New Orleans Minstrels at Hornellsville, Ky., May 29.

CIRCUSES.

VAN AMBURGH & CO.'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS is to show in Port Covington, N. Y., June 19, Messina 20, Potsdam Junction 21, Canton 22, Ogdensburg 23, Prescott, Canada, 24. The prices of admission in Canada are to be reduced to twenty-five cents.

ALEXANDER STRINGOL, light and heavy balancer, died in Lockport, N. Y., May 28. He first performed in public about sixteen years ago. He had traveled with A. J. Dean's and other circuses, and fulfilled engagements in various variety theatres. Some two years ago he retired, and since that time has resided in Lockport with his mother. His remains were buried by the Dramatic Club of that city, of which deceased had been a member.

L. B. LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS is to show in New London, Wis., June 12, Waupaca 13, Spencer 14, Stevens' Point 15, Grand Rapids 16, Whitehall 17, Winona, Minn., 19, Rochester 20, Mankato 21, New Ulm 22, Saratoga 23, Cottonwood 24.

GYMNASTIC PARK, St. Jean Baptiste, Montreal, Canada, which is fully described in our advertising department, can be rented for circuses, and the manager wants to purchase a second-hand canvas.

A LARGE CANVAS, with poles, ropes, stakes, chains, etc., is advertised for sale cheap by Charles Elois.

MARTIN F. KAUFMANN, billposter, Peoria, Ill., has 700 feet of billboards to rent. There will be a three-days' celebration there, commencing July 3.

THE PAVILION AMPHITHEATRE, Broad and Callowhill streets, Philadelphia, has been leased by S. J. Horne of San Francisco, who will reopen it on the 14th inst., with his "Golden City Circus." Fritz Hartman will be the musical director, and Charles Whitney the press agent.

JOHN PATTY, whose address find in another column, can be engaged with his performing bears.

O. P. MYERS, advance agent of Montgomery Queen's Circus, arrived in Chicago, Ill., about a week ago, and is suffering from indigestion and a nervous disease. His physician has ordered him to remain quiet for at least six months, and during that time Mr. Myers will reside in Chicago. He informs us that Charley Pell and Eugene Weller will have charge of the show in advance. Business is as good as the depressed state of the country will admit of. Fred Levantine is in San Francisco, Cal., suffering from sore eyes.

MARIE'S LONDON MENAGERIE and Buckley's Equestrian Exposition exhibited in Napoleon, La., June 7, and is to show in Alexandria 17, thence into Texas, traveling by wagons.

A TREASURER, with capital, is wanted for a circus. See Hiram Lay's card.

BARNUM'S Show opens on Columbus avenue, Boston, Mass., June 19.

CARLO'S DEATH AND FUNERAL.—Carlo, a dog supposed to be about 19 years old, was run over in Knoxville, Ia., and so severely injured that it died in Galesburg, Ill., June 2. For eleven years it had been the constant companion of the elephant Betsey, this season being exhibited with Cooper, Bailey & Co.'s circus. After the matinee performance was over, Carlo's body, which had been sewn up in canvas, was taken up tenderly by Betsey in her trunk, and she headed a procession to a grave which had been dug near the circus ring. Four other elephants and the attaches of the circus followed. After marching twice around the arena, a halt was made at the grave, and, after the keeper had caused the other elephants to kneel down, Betsey deposited Carlo's remains in the grave, and covered them with earth with her trunk. When the evening procession was made Betsey pulled up a stake, which had been driven into the earth to mark Carlo's last resting-place, and threw it one side, and it was with difficulty that her keeper could get her away from the spot. The elephant mourned piteously, and, apparently, was deeply affected by the loss of her faithful companion.

THE TICKET-SELLER of O'Brien's Circus, writes our correspondent on June 11, "issued so many bright new quarter dollars of 1876 in Troy, N. Y., on June 8, that the U. S. Marshal secured a number, thinking they might be 'queer.' Troy bankers being unable to discover anything wrong about them, the coins were sent to Washington for headquarters' decision."

BARNUM'S Show gave five performances in Providence, R. I., June 5, 6, to a large attendance. The tatooed Greek was added to the show there.

MISCELLANEOUS.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Shamokin, Pa., furnished with a stage, scenery, gas, etc., and having a seating capacity of 700, can be rented by applying as per advertisement.

WASHBURN'S NEW HALL, Yonkers, N. Y., can be rented by applying to W. F. Washburn, who advertises the house as having a seating capacity of 1,000; that it is furnished with a complete set of scenery, and has all the accommodations of a well-organized theatre.

PORTLAND (Me.) MUSEUM, with stock of scenery, etc., can be leased for a term of years by applying to J. M. Fluent, who advertises.

CAPT. MCDONALD'S BAND OF TRAINED INDIANS sailed from San Francisco, Cal., June 1, in the steamship Granada, for New York.

HARRY JILLSON, aeronaut, can be secured to make balloon ascensions by addressing as per card, for which he announces balloons and apparatus made to order.

TUCKER BROS., show painters, advertise their establishment in another column.

AMATEUR.

THE HUMOROUS and original travesty on Brougham's burlesque of "Pocahontas" by J. H. Rathbone, of Washington, D. C., was produced at Ford's Opera-house, in that city, on the evening of June 6, to a very large and fashionable audience, for the benefit of the Centennial fund of the Knights of Pythias of the District of Columbia, and proved a complete success. The principals in the cast, although not now in the profession, have nearly all "fretted their hour." The author, an accomplished musician and vocalist, and founder of the order of the Knights of Pythias, assumed the title-role, with really fine effect. He was ably supported by T. Harry Donehue, as King Powhatan, and his make-up and acting of the part were excellent, as were the Rolff of Geo. D. Scott, the Lieut. Brown of H. E. Leach, and the John Smith of J. Rice. The burlesque is replete with humor and local hits, and bubbles over with choice selections from the most popular music of the day. The solos, duets, trios and quartets were finely rendered. The farce of "Box and Cox" preceded the travesty, and was creditably performed by members of the Joe Jefferson amateur club. Prof. Tweedale also gave one of his select readings. Letter of June 11.

THE ST. EDWARDS CLUB of Cincinnati, O., played "Cast upon the World" at Robinson's Opera-house, in that city, June 8, before a large and delighted audience.

FOREIGN SHOW NEWS.

DRAMATIC.

"LE LUTHIER DE CREMONE," a one-act comedy by M. Francois Coppel, was produced at the Theatre Francaise, Paris, France, May 23.

The scene is laid at Cremona, and the action takes place in the shop of Maitre Ferrari, the most skillful violin-maker of that fiddle-renowned city, who had learned his art at the feet of the great Straduarius himself. A public prize has been offered—a golden chain—to the apprentice who makes the best instrument, and Ferrari has solemnly sworn that he will give his daughter Giannina to the victorious competitor, and will constitute him his successor in his business. Ferrari has two apprentices, Sandro and Filippo, the former young and handsome, the latter also young, but a hunchback and hideously ugly. Giannina loves Sandro, who is passionately attached to the pretty girl, and she promises him that, even were he to fail in the contest, she will give her hand to no other. To Filippo Giannina is always beaten the kindest companion. The boys hoot the poor hunchback in the streets, but his master's daughter has ever a sweet, compassionate word for him. And he loves her silently, but as deeply as Sandro. As he says, he cherishes a dream which he knows will kill him. At last the whole truth breaks upon him. Sandro, though he has made a splendid violin, is doubtful of success. He knows with what talent the deformed Filippo is gifted, and his jealousy is so deep that when the latter offers his violin to Sandro he cannot take it. Filippo, on the contrary, is sure of the prize. He has discovered the secret of the varnish by which the great Cremona makers succeeded in giving such marvelous depth of tone to their instruments. He cannot fail. When he imparts to Giannina this certainty, telling her the secret of the varnish which places it beyond doubt, and playing a morceau which Coquelin executed in the brilliant style as a proof of the perfection of his instrument, the young girl bursts into tears. The poor hunchback thinks it is the power of his art which makes her weep, but she confesses to him that it is her regret, because she now sees Sandro cannot be successful. The blow is a terrible one to Filippo, but under his deformed exterior the poor fellow possesses a heart of gold and an angelic soul, capable of the supremest sacrifice. Of what good to him the success, if it will render Giannina unhappy? He takes up his violin with the intention of breaking it, and then the idea occurs to him that perhaps another competitor may snatch the prize from Sandro. He will substitute the chef d'œuvre for that of his rival, thus securing the triumph of the latter, and no one will be aware of this heroic act of sacrifice. When summoned to the Town Hall for the competition, dreading the insults of the mob, he asks Sandro to carry both their instruments before the judges. And then happens a strange incident by which all his noble intentions are frustrated. Sandro no sooner becomes the depositary of the two violins than, yielding to a horrid temptation, he changes them in their cases, and, overcome with remorse, hurries back to confess his treachery to Filippo. Then the hunchback reveals to him that his act has brought with it his own punishment, for he has only restored to their rightful places their respective instruments. Another moment and all the civic dignitaries, with a shouting posse comitatus, come to proclaim Filippo's victory. Ferrari will keep his promise, but the hunchback, placing the gold chain on Giannina's neck, puts her hand in that of Sandro, and asking them sometimes to give him a kind thought, declares his intention of leaving his native city forever.

The cast included Thiron as Ferrari, Laroche as Sandro, Coquelin as Filippo, and Mlle. Barretta as Giannina.

"LA CIGALE CHEZ LES FOURMIS," a one-act piece by MM. Legouve and Labiche, was first acted at the Theatre Francaise, Paris, on the evening of May 23. The plot is as follows:

M. and Madame Chameroy, two worthy persons, have worked hard all their lives until they have amassed a fortune that brings them an income of a hundred and fifty millions of francs. They are rich, but they neither boast nor make a display of their wealth, for that might lead to additional expense; so, instead of expending their income, they invest it in railway shares and other sound securities, which M. Chameroy tries to prove to his pretty daughter is another form of expenditure. They are not avaricious, but the habit of their parsimonious lives has become such second nature to them that they cannot help saving. They live comfortably, but palatably, and still retain the ugly old furniture and the venerable carriage that have served them all their lives. In this way Henrietta's marriage portion will be a much more substantial one. This fortune and this pretty girl are sought by a certain gentleman of good family, who is coming to present himself to the Chameroys. But an hour or two before his expected arrival a letter, written by a lady, the friend of this gentleman, is put into M. Chameroy's hand. This lady it is who has been negotiating the proposed marriage. She made a mistake, however, when putting her epistles in their envelopes, and the one intended for Chameroy is sent to the suitor, while, in the latter, the wealthy merchant receives that destined for his future son-in-law. The latter consequently is horrified when he reads the too confidential terms in which the lady in question speaks of himself and his economical partners. "I warn you," she writes, "that the Chameroys are rather common. They are nothing more than 'ants,' knowing right well how to make money, but without any idea how to spend it. Reflect, therefore, before you enter such an 'ant-hill.'" Husband, wife, and pretty daughter are all shocked. They vulgar and niggardly, indeed! Chameroy especially is horrified at such an idea, and he resolves to prove to his future son-in-law that he knows how to be extravagant. But to spend money is beyond his abilities, and he does not know at what end to begin. Fortunately for him an unexpected visitor, who has a promissory note to take up, arrives to relieve him from this dilemma. Paris de Vinesil is the "grasshopper" who has sung all the Summer; he has squandered two millions in six months, and is perfectly contented at having done so. A gayer or better-natured spendthrift never lived. He is the very man who can show Chameroy the way by which he can best throw his fortune out of the windows. The old "ant" explains the embarrassment in which he is placed, and asks Paul to favor him with his advice. The latter yields to the pressure put upon him, and at once draws up an inventory of new furniture, carriages, horses, and other luxuries that horrifies Chameroy's economical soul. Henriette also asks the young man's advice, for people have said she is "awkward." Paul recommends an alteration of "coiffure" and a change of dressmaker, and other reforms, proving himself at the same time such a charming, generous-hearted fellow that Henriette is delighted, when a note arrives from the original possessor, in whose favor all this fuss has been instituted, breaking off all hopes of the proposed marriage. No sooner has Paul left the room than she tells her parents that if he will take her, the "Cigale" shall be her husband and no other, and very fortunately Paul, who has forgotten a gorgeous umbrella, and has come back for it, overhears this confession, and, as Henriette has charmed him greatly, there is no longer a difficulty to be overcome.

The character of Paul was sustained by Delaunay, Barre appeared as M. Chameroy, Mme. Lassassin as Madame Chameroy, and Mlle. Thuret as the daughter.

J. C. WILLIAMSON and Miss Maggie Moore's performances in "The Colleen Bawn" at the Adelphi Theatre, London, are thus reviewed in The Era:

The interest in the story was last Saturday strengthened by the effective acting of Miss Maggie Moore and Mr. J. C. Williamson played for the first time in London the characters of Eily O'Connor and Myles-na-Coppaleen, especially associated with the name of Dion Boucicault in Australia. It is gratifying to be enabled to state that their respective impersonations deservedly obtained the warmest approval from a very numerous and most enthusiastic audience. The pathos of Miss Maggie Moore was natural and deeply impressive throughout, and the hearty Hibernian humor of Mr. J. C. Williamson, whose personal attributes enabled him to thoroughly realize the portraiture of the stalwart son of Erin, equally ready to evade the excisemen and risk his own life to save that of the girl who had been so cruelly wronged and so fondly loved, won the fullest sympathies of the spectators. In the first act Miss Maggie Moore's pretty face had a pleasing shading of the stirring characteristic song of "Cruiskeen Lawn," and a similar compliment was paid to her for her appropriate introduction in the second act of the popular song known as "The Pretty Girl Milking the Cow." Besides a steady tribute of spontaneous acclamations paid during the performance, possibly enforced the reappearance of both artists before the footlights at the end of each act, and in these additional demonstrations of the delight experienced by the auditory the principal members of the company had a well-merited share.

FINANCIAL SUCCESS OF THE PARIS THEATRES.—The French society of dramatic authors and composers has just published its annual table of the receipts of the Paris theatres for the year ending on the 31st of March last. This table shows that the Paris stage is, from a financial point of view, in a very flourishing condition, and that the theatres which have increased their receipts the most within the last twelvemonth are the Opera, the Theatre Francais, the Odeon, the Vaudeville, the Theatre Historique, and the Renaissance. The greatest increase is that made by the Opera—from £73,975 in the year ending March 31, 1875, to £146,061 in the present year; but it must be added that during nine months of the former year the Opera was at the Salle Ventadour, and that it was only within the last three months of that year that the Nouvel Opera was opened. It has been found that since its opening the receipts have averaged £800 a night, and there are signs that this average will be still further raised in the course of another year. The principals at the Theatre Francais, mainly owing to the success of "La Fille de Roland" and "L'Etranger," have increased from £58,997 to £60,592; and at the Odeon, which has achieved a great success with "Les Danicheff," there has been a large rise, more than £6,000—from £20,132 in 1874–5 to £25,154 in 1875–6. But the theatre which has, comparatively speaking, prospered the most during the last twelvemonth is the Vaudeville, where the receipts, which had fallen to £13,236 for the previous year, have risen to £21,560. They have, in other words, nearly trebled themselves within a twelvemonth, and this is entirely due to a change of management.

MRS. JOHN WOOD was to have commenced a twelve nights' engagement at the Royal St. James Theatre on June 3, it being her first appearance in London this season.

J. H. ALDEN is acting in "Davy Crockett" at the Victoria Theatre, London, Eng.

"A STRANGE RELATION," a new three-act comedy by Edward Compton, was produced at the Prince of Wales Theatre, Liverpool, Eng., May 22. It is thus spoken of: "It may at times be rather farcical, and a good deal of sermonizing sentimentality might wisely be cut out; but, taken as a whole, there is much in the piece to recommend it to favorable notice. The idea of individual character is good, and some of the situations are very striking. The action opens in the drawing-room of a house in Westbourne-grove, occupied by Mr. Dacre Somerset, enlisted from the Civil Service, whose only daughter, Florence, is engaged to Percy Veering, a rising young actor, and whose ward (Constance Convers) is also engaged to Adolph Vane in the city, whose chief business seems to be to act as friend to his prosperous acquaintance. The two happy couples are about to be married, when Romer, a seedy and eccentric individual, comes on the scene. This strange arrival turns out to be one of the guardians of Constance, and he refuses his consent to the union, and continues the suit of Percy for the hand of Florence, and apparently brings matters to a crisis by insisting on her marrying him, or taking the alternative of her father's ruin, as it appears he is capable of doing in connection with his office of guardian and the management of money. Romer makes himself generally disagreeable, says all sorts of strange things, his special weakness being a funny mixture of proverbs and an almost continual desire to be writing "little notes." Romer pretends to be rich, but he has no pockets against every and any appeal, and has evidently about completed the unhappiness of everybody, when he suddenly reveals himself, and explains that he has all along been acting a part—that he has merely been receiving a trenis and unkind manner for the purpose of testing them all round. Everybody is made happy, and the comedy ends most satisfactorily. The dialogue is at times very brisk and pointed, but the author falls into the mistake of making everyone talk as if he or she were as sharp as razors."

CHARLES NUGENT, for a long time connected with Her Majesty's Theatre, London, under Mr. Lumley's management, and with Astley's under E. T. Smith, died on May 21, aged 67 years.

THE FATHER of George Lupino, pantomimic clown, died in Peckham, Eng., May 21.

ON THE OCCASION OF Mr. Charles Sugden's benefit, May 24, at the Gaiety Theatre, London, Eng., Arthur Cecil made a great hit in the character of a tall and awkward gap by an entertainment which might be described as a monologue, were it not that it was given entirely in dumb-show. Mr. Cecil simply came on the stage and illustrated, in elaborate action, the miserable experiences of a man sitting for his photograph. So admirably was this done, and so humorous was the pantomime, that the amused interest of the house was held for at least ten minutes.

"THE BELLE'S STRATAGEM" is in preparation at the Lyceum Theatre, London, Eng.

AT EDINBURGH, Scotland, Dunnah play "L'Etrangere" was to have been produced at the Haymarket Theatre, London, Eng., June 3.

MUSICAL.

"LE MAGNIFIQUE," a one-act comic-opera, music by M. Phillippot, libretto by Jules Barbier, was recently brought out at the Lyrique, Paris, France. The story is derived from one of La Fontaine's tales. One Aldobrandin, an old Florentine citizen, has a pretty ward, whom he desires to marry. But the charms of Celie have captivated a handsome young gallant, Horace, whose reckless and generous extravagance has earned for him the cognomen of "The Magnificent," and he endeavors by all sorts of ruses to deceive the vigilance of her guardian. At last he offers Aldobrandin his palace, with all its contents, if he will grant him a quarter-hour's interview with his ward. The old fellow should be stated, is also in love with him, though they have never exchanged a word. Aldobrandin consents to the meeting on condition that he shall be present, and seeks to outwit Horace by making Celie promise that she will not utter a word to her admirer. Horace at once perceives the trick that the wily old citizen has played upon him, but he turns the tables upon Aldobrandin in an ingenious way. He not only puts questions to his inamorata, but also devises answers to them—all, of course, favorable to his suit—and to these she nods willing assent. There are in the piece a false duenna, a couple of valets, one scheming and the other silly, and an intriguing serving-woman. Tissier appeared as Aldobrandin, Montaubry as Horace, Mlle. Marcus as Celie, and Mlle. Rosavella MAKE A FAILURE?—Glowing accounts of the successful debut of Miss Blanche Tucker, under the stage name of Mlle. Rosavella, at Covent-garden Theatre, have been sent to America from various sources. "Cherubino," the musical critic of The Figaro, in the issue of May 31, writes as follows: "The comparisons which were made between Madame Patti and the younger American vocalist, most favorable to the latter, are simply absurd. Most sorry am I to say it, but Mlle. Rosavella has not only failed to carry London by storm, she has been so unsuccessful that Mr. Gye has been unwillingly enough compelled to totally withdraw her name from the opera bills."

CARL ROSA has decided not to come to America next Winter, as originally he intended.

CHAS. HEYWOOD, the male soprano, has been engaged at Concert L'Horloge, Champs Elysees, Paris, France, until Sept. 1.

VARIETY HALLS.

CANFIELD AND BOOKER are performing at the Oxford, London, Eng.....The Bayno Brothers and the Weston Sisters are at the Pavilion....Henri Clark, comic vocalist, was about to appear with his wife in a new entertainment.

E. C. DUNBAR arrived in Liverpool, Eng., May 23. On his voyage home he gave three concerts in the cause of charity.

MRS. WATTS, wife of the proprietor of Sam Collins' Music Hall, London, died May 22, in the forty-sixth year of her age.

MRS. HARWOOD, the wife of George Harwood, proprietor of the Variety Theatre, Hoxton, died May 19. Deceased was formerly known in the profession as an excellent vocalist, under the name of Jenny Wade.

WILLIAM WALTER WHITLOCK, comedian and vocalist, was married May 14 to Harriet Ann Mitchell of Boston, Eng.

REYNOLDS AND ADAMS, Dutch comiques, are performing in the South London Palace, London.

THE BRITANT BROTHERS, American song-and-dance, are at the Royal Music Hall, Hoborn, London, Eng.

NEGRO MINSTRELSY.

DAVE CARSON, the minstrel performer, popularly known in India as the "Bengalee Baboo," is sojourning in Paris, France.

CIRCUSES.

J. W. MYERS' CIRCUS, which has been exhibiting for some time past in Paris, France, is to open in the Crystal Palace, London, Eng., June 20. Its extent may be to some degree realized by the fact that it employs the services of no less than 150 horses and ponies, of nine trained elephants, of six white camels, a splendid group of lions, two performing mules, and comprises a company of more than 150 artists of almost all civilized nations, composed of acrobats, equestrians, clowns, etc., of great ability and originality.

A PERMANENT CIRCUS is to be erected in Liverpool, Eng., at the top of Brunswick road, opposite the Necropolis in the West Derby road, for Mr. Thos. Hengler. This is a very central position, nearly the centre of Liverpool. Over 400 buses pass the site every day. It will, says The Builder, be the largest circus in England, holding about 4,000 persons. It will be 200ft. wide, 140ft. long, with a gallery in the front end and two sides, carried out with ornamental fronts and carton-pierre ornaments. The ceiling will be an arched one, with a new style of sunlight. The gallery-entrance and pit exit will be in Walter street. The pit-entrance and the box and parterre entrance will be in West Derby road. There will also be five shops in this road one-story high. The stables will be built of brick and stone, with all the newest ornamental iron stable-fittings, ventilated and detached from the circus. A dozen stables and coach-house yard will also be provided in Walker street for the convenience of gentlemen driving to the circus, so that horses and men will be provided with shelter immediately on arrival at the building. The works will cost over £12,000.

PROPOSED QUOTING MATCH.

Graham vs. Pearson.

We have received the subjoined letter from George Graham, the celebrated English quoitist, with an inclosure containing a challenge from Nellie Pearson of the City of Quakers:

LONDON, ENG., May 22, '76.

EDITOR N. Y. CLIPPER.—Dear Sir: Herewith you have inclosed a letter to our Sporting Life from Job Pearson, quoit-player, in which he is reported to have said that he challenged me when in England, after he was defeated on the same terms, except that each man was to be limited to three feet from either of the pins' side. These terms I accepted on Newcastle race-course in June last. We parted at that place with the understanding that he (Pearson) was to send articles to me, and a deposit to The Sporting Life to confirm a match for £50 a side for two matches, one in London and the other in Yorkshire. This was to have been done in seven days from our meeting at Newcastle. I went to London to attend to it, but no articles or deposit arrived. I wrote Pearson two letters to Yorkshire, to know the reason why—they remain unanswered. I trust the foregoing will be the means of inducing Mr. Pearson, as an act of fairness from one gentleman to another, to correct the statements made in The Sporting Life of May 17. Resenting to his present challenge, I can only say that I am ready and willing to play Mr. Pearson, or any man in America, on the following conditions: 18yds., 81 points up, men to have four feet limit from the pin side, quoits not to exceed ten inches across, for £200 a side; £40 to be allowed for my expenses in going to America; the other conditions to be as in the last match between Mr. Pearson and myself. Articles and a deposit of £50 sent to THE NEW YORK CLIPPER will be attended to through The Sporting Life. The match to be played in September next. Awaiting a reply, I am yours, respectfully, GEORGE GRAHAM.

R. P. I. ATHLETIC SPORTS.

The inaugural meeting of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Athletic Association was held at Rensselaer Park, Troy, N. Y., on Saturday afternoon, June 3. None of those participating had made necessary preparation for the contests in which they engaged; in fact, but few of them trained at all, and in consequence allowance is to be made for the rather indifferent character of the performances below recorded:

Three-mile walk, three starters—Beck, 31:13, his opponents not finishing.

Running broad jump—Waller, 15ft. 10in.; Auerbach, 14ft. 4¾in.; Herbono, 13ft. 11¼in.; Nelles, 13ft. 9in.

Standing jump—Waller, 9ft. 3¼in.; Grifith, 9ft. 1¼in.; Auerbach, 8ft. 6¾in.; Herbono, 8ft. 3in.; Nelles, 8ft. 6½in.

Half-mile run, 3 starters—Newton, 2min. 26sec.; Willett, second.

Standing high jump, 4 entries—Merrifield, 3ft. 4in.; Waller, 3ft. 3in.

Running high jump, 5 entries—Newton, 4ft. 1in.

One-mile walk, 3 starters—Young, 9min. 7½sec.

100-yard dash, 7 entries—Waller, three feet, in 12sec.

One-mile race, 4 entries—Merrifield, 5:01½.

Running hop, step and jump—Newton, 37ft. 9in.; Carter, 36ft. 5in.; Nicholson, 35ft. 3in.

Referee, Walter N. Thayer, Troy A. C. Timekeeper, Le Grand Cramer.

TO STARS OR FIRST-CLASS COMBINATIONS MR. AND MRS. GEO. WARE

Return to England in July or August,

MRS. WARE BEING RE-ENGAGED FOR THE GLASGOW CITY HALL CONCERTS.

MR. GEO. WARE WILL BE PLEASED TO MAKE ARRANGEMENTS WITH ANY STAR OR COMBINATION EITHER AS AGENT OR ON SHARES.

Having had 25 years' practical experience, personally acquainted with nearly every manager in Great Britain, can write, alter and adapt an American piece to suit a British audience. Can guarantee an immediate engagement on arrival in either London, Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow or Dublin; knows every city and town in England, Ireland and Scotland; also principal cities of India, China, Africa, Spain, Portugal, and from St. John, N. B., to San Francisco, California, knowing the rent and expenses to show there. G. W. is author of the songs (words and music) of the principal comic vocalists in the world, including Tony Pastor, the Vokes Family, Lingard, Taylor, Mrs. Oates' Company, Erin and the Brennans, Lydia Thompson, San Francisco Minstrels, Emmerson's Minstrels, Berger Family, Ella Wesner, Lotta, Cool Burgess, Jolly Nash, Vance, Leybourne, Lloyd, Mackney, Toole, George Honey, Holmans, Peak Family, Washburne Sensation, Duprez & Benedict's, Carncross & Dixey's, Simmons & Slocum's, Bryant's; in fact, there is not a theatre or music hall in the world (where the English language is spoken) but my songs have been played or sung.

Lady or Gentleman Stars or Combination apply to GEORGE WARE, care of CLIPPER Office, New York.

P. S.—G. W. will not arrive in New York till nearly July, being en route from San Francisco. 12-1t*
